will become a new generation of technology," Mayor Beame and the president of the Ashmont Metal Company, a New York-based organization, signed contracts yesterday that will lead to the construction of a $12 million plant adjacent to the Southwest Brooklyn Incinerator, a city-operated facility at Bay 38th Street and 25th Avenue in the Bensonhurst section.
At a City Hall ceremony, Paul Liu, president of Ashmont, explained that the company's plant, expected to open in 18 months, "will convert refuse-derived metals into quality steel without any form of pollution."
"In this way we hope to introduce a new generation of technology, one which will work for man's environment," he said.
The plant will have the capacity of producing 400 tons a day of "very high grade steel," Mr. Liu said. He said his company had letters of intent to purchase its output from a number of other companies, but

Carter Appears Near Goal In Last 3 Primaries Today

LOS ANGELES, June 7—Barring unforeseen collapses on three fronts, Jimmy Carter appears likely to win enough delegates tomorrow to put him within relatively easy hailing distance of the Democratic Presidential nomination.

SPECIALTY STEELS WILL FACE QUOTAS

President Ford announced yesterday the signing of documents that will lead to the imposition of quotas on imports of specialty steels.
He made the announcement at Middletown, Ohio, the home of the Armco Steel Corporation, one of the nation's leading specialty-steel makers. The President had announced earlier that he would impose quotas unless voluntary restraints were observed by supplying nations.

President Ford told the Ohio audience that the quotas would mean more jobs for workers in the Middletown area. Steel industry officials have put unemployment in the specialty-steel field as high as 40 percent last year. This was traced both to the recession and to imports.
About 65,000 workers are employed in the specialty-steel side of the industry. Specialty steels include stainless steels, tool and die steels, high temperature alloys, electrical, magnetic, refractory, electronic and reactive alloys and specialty tubing.

ANDERSON SEEKING A CITY U. ADVANCE

Asks $24 Million to Reopen Campuses Immediately—
Rebuffs Democrats

By IVER PETERSON
Special to The New York Times
ALBANY, June 7—The State Senate's majority leader, Warren M. Anderson, called this afternoon for the appropriation of a $24 million advance to reopen the bankrupt City University immediately.
The Binghamton Republican, who has rejected a Democratic plan to link the $24-million in aid to a long-term reorganization of the university system, thus sought to rebuff Democratic charges that his opposition to their plan was responsible for the Legislature's failure to rescue the university.
It was difficult this afternoon to judge the chances for Mr. Anderson's proposals to pass the Assembly and be signed by the Governor, who is allied with the Assembly leaders' City University plan. But although the Democrats have not been able to weigh Mr. Anderson's bill, the politics of the City University debate suggest at first glance that his chances are better than any other proposal put forth so far.
Mr. Anderson's proposal

Goldin Reports City Is Being Victimized On Day-Care Rents

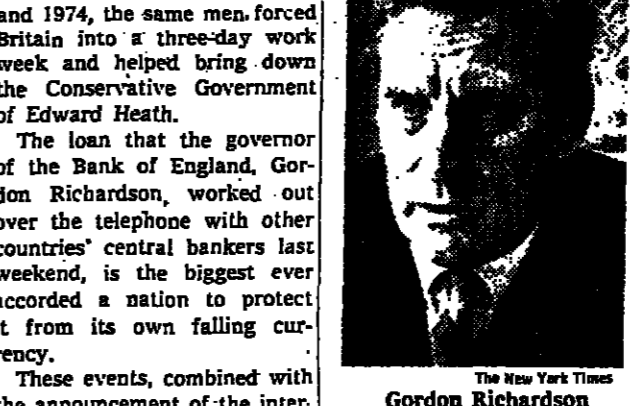

By PETER KIHSS
Auditors for Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin charge that New York City has agreed to high rents for day-care centers it leases directly, "without relation to cost, resulting in excessive profits to developers."

The auditors' report on a current investigation proposes that the city "pursue every possible means for terminating leases" it does not need, and it says the direct-lease centers now operating average only 73 percent use, or use by 17,407 children.
Fourteen more projects are in the construction stage, the report says, and will commit the city to additional costs totaling $26 million beyond the current leases for 169 sites. The leases already call for more than $300 million to be paid over 15- and 20-year periods. All told, the city has 391 day care centers.
Criticized in the report for their policies are the city's Real Estate Department and the Agency for Child Development.
In at least some cases, the reports says, the program is "unconscionably a developer's dream — no money down and a substantial return."
The Comptroller's engineers reported that a center at 561 Livonia Avenue, Brooklyn, had a mort-

British Economic Actions And Credit Buoy Pound

Callaghan Defers Moves to Nationalize Ship and Aircraft Builders—Miners to Accept Stiff Curbs on Wages

By PETER T. KILBORN
Special to The New York Times
LONDON, June 7—The battered British pound staged a strong recovery today, buoyed by domestic economic developments as well as by a $5.3 billion international line of credit.
Prime Minister James Callaghan's announcement that he would postpone further moves toward nationalizing the shipbuilding and aircraft industries—an issue that has aroused furious opposition in the House of Commons—was regarded favorably in the foreign exchange markets.
Moreover, the often militant miners agreed to accept stiff wage restraints that will mean declining living standards for them. In the winter of 1973 and 1974, the same men forced Britain into a three-day work week and helped bring down the Conservative Government of Edward Heath.
The loan that the governor of the Bank of England, Gordon Richardson, worked out over the telephone with other countries' central bankers last weekend, is the biggest ever accorded a nation to protect it from its own falling currency.
These events, combined with the announcement of the inter-

New Indictment Charges Coercion by Cunningham

in the alleged sale of a 25 percent increase in the maintenance charges on his apartment, despite his public support of a Co-op City residents' strike protesting the increase.
In its next issue, The City News, which has a circulation of 12,500, printed pictures of Mr. Kaufman's checks showing he had paid his charges without the 25 percent increase to the Tenants Steering Committee, but had sent a second check to the management including the increase. An editorial called for Mr. Kaufman's resignation from the City Council. The paper also said that Mr. Glanzrock had refused to denounce Mr. Kaufman.
According to the indictment,
Mr. Glanzrock, who is 42 years old and is secretary of the city's Department of Water Resources, first spoke to the Surrogate in August, seeking to stop the paper's legal advertis-

Then Mr. Glanzrock met with Mr. Cunningham to say The

$5.3 BILLION IN AID PROVIDED BRITAIN TO BOLSTER POUND

U.S., Joining Industrialized Nations and Settlements Bank, Puts Up $2 Billion

STERLING IN STRONG RISE Simon Sees London's Use of Standby Credit Hinging on Market Movements
By EDWIN L. DALE Jr.
Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, June 7—The United States joined with other industrialized countries today to provide a $5.3 billion standby line of short-term credit for Britain to bolster the pound. The United States put up $2 billion of the total.
The pound promptly rose strongly in foreign-exchange markets, closing at $1.77 in New York. This compared with a low of $1.70 touched briefly last Thursday after a sustained decline.
The decline of the pound's exchange rate was damaging, in different ways, to both Britain and the other leading nations. It exacerbated inflation in Britain, where prices rose almost 19 percent in the 12 months ended in April, and gave Britain an artificial competitive advantage in selling its goods abroad. The unremitting decline also posed a psychological threat to the British Government.
No Effort to 'Peg' It
This led to the effort to reverse the pound's fortunes though there will be no effort to "peg" it at any particular rate.
"Britain may never have to draw on the new credit. But this would depend on market movements," Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon said.
The package was arranged among the 10 largest industrialized countries, known as the Group of 10, plus Switzerland and the Bank for International Settlements.
The Washington announcement by the Treasury and Federal Reserve Board said, "These arrangements have been made in the light of the recent fall in the value of the pound sterling under exchange market pressures which have led to disorderly market conditions, and in the common interest in the stability and efficient functioning of the international monetary system."
Floating Exchange Rates
The key was the reference to "disorderly market conditions." Although the world now operates on a system of floating exchange rates, with the price of currencies largely determined by supply and demand

Supreme Court Upholds Exam In Which Blacks Scored Low

By LESLEY OELSNER
Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, June 7—The Supreme Court ruled today, 7 to 2, that a statute or other official act is not unconstitutional just because it places a "substantially disproportionate" burden on one race.
To prove a violation of the Constitution's ban against racial discrimination, the Court said, "it is also necessary to prove 'racially discriminatory purpose.'"
The Court's ruling rejects the more expansive view that many lower Federal courts have taken in numerous recent cases. It also appears to contrast somewhat with the language in the Supreme Court's earlier rulings.
The Court sought to depict today's holdings as consistent with its earlier holdings. However, at least some of the lower Federal court rulings were based in part on interpretations by lower courts of earlier Supreme Court decisions. Also, the Supreme Court itself conceded that "there are some indications to the contrary [of today's ruling] in our cases."
Today's decision came in a

Death Sought for Mercenaries in Angola

By MARVINE ROWE
Special to The New York Times
LUANDA, Angola, June 7—Government investigators have asked for the death penalty for two Americans and 11 other prisoners who are to be tried on charges of having fought as mercenaries in the Angolan civil war.

An attorney from Columbus, Ohio, who is to defend the two Americans, said tonight after spending four hours with them: "They don't understand why they are on trial for their lives. They never fired a shot. They haven't violated any law or committed any war crimes."

The two American prisoners are Gary Martin Acker, a 21-year-old former marine of Sacramento, Cal., and Daniel Francis Gearhart, 34, a Vietnam war veteran from Washington, D.C. They and the 11 other prisoners were captured last February while with the pro-Western nationalist movement called the National Front for the Liberation of Angola.

Not American, One Says

One of the 11, Gustavo Marcelo Grillo, 27, who was born in Buenos Aires but served with the United States Marines in Vietnam, said he was not an American citizen. He has indicated that he does not want to be defended by the American lawyer, Robert Cesner Jr. Mr. Cesner, who arrived here yesterday, said that he expected the trial to start on Friday and to last "more than a few days."

Lawyer Meets With Two Americans—Says They 'Never Fired a Shot'

The lawyer told reporters that one of his main lines of defense would be "the legal question involving the concept of a mercenary."

The prisoners are to be tried before the People's Revolutionary Court, composed of five Angolan judges. Three Angolan lawyers will provide defense for the other prisoners, nine of whom are Britons and one an Irishman. Three British lawyers have declined to come here as defense counsels.

According to the indictment, which has not been published officially, the prisoners are accused of having come to Angola, armed and in uniform, to kill for pay with the aim of destroying the freedom of the Angolan people.

Each prisoner also faces separate charges. The two Americans are not specifically accused of having killed anyone. Mr. Gearhart had been in the country only three days when he was captured and Mr. Acker four days. The others had been in the country less than one month.

Morale Termed Good
"The American prisoners' morale is good," Mr. Cesner declared. "They both said they were not ill treated."

The prisoners said they were fed regularly, getting rice, very little meat and some fish, as well as bread, rolls and hot chocolate in the morning, according to the lawyer.

All of the prisoners are being held in St. Paul Prison in Luanda except Mr. Grillo. Mr. Cesner met with Mr. Acker and Mr. Gearhart in a small room at the entrance of the prison and talked to each for several hours. There was no Angolan official present during the meetings.

Letters Given to Americans
The prisoners appeared pale but in good health, Mr. Cesner said. He was permitted to give letters to the prisoners from their families, their first contact since their arrest. Both Mr. Acker and Mr. Gearhart signed statements declaring that they wanted Mr. Cesner to represent them.

The Angolan Minister of Justice Diógenes Boavida, speaking today at the opening session of a specially invited international commission of inquiry, asked the group to examine "the phenomenon of mercenaries," their political significance the form of their recruitment and their actions. "We must stop those who arm them or help them in their activities," Mr. Boavida told the 44 jurists and academicians from 27 countries.

Greek Collector Denies Plot To Move Egyptian Antiques

ATHENS, June 7 (Reuters)—A Greek art collector has strongly denied Egyptian suggestions that he intended smuggling out of Egypt a quantity of antiquities found in the basement of his villa in Alexandria.

Cairo newspapers reported last month that about 30,000 valuable amphora handles from the eras of Greek and Roman domination of Egypt had been found in a villa owned by the collector, L. A. Benaki, who is now living in Athens. The reports suggested that there were plans to smuggle them out of Egypt.

A magazine later quoted Yusef Hanna, director of the Alexandria Greco-Roman museum, as saying that most of the amphora handles had been donated to the museum by Mr. Benaki in 1963.

In Athens, with his denial, Mr. Benaki said he had donated his collection to the museum in 1963 when he left Egypt. About half the collection was put on display and the rest remained crated in the basement of his villa in Alexandria until the museum had sufficient funds to build display cabinets for them, he said.

Arab League Summons Key Ministers on Lebanon

Special to The New York Times
CAIRO, June 7—The Arab League today called an emergency meeting of its member nation's foreign ministers for tomorrow to discuss the war in Lebanon.

The meeting was requested by the Palestine Liberation Organization last week after Syrian troops had marched over the border into Lebanon. It was originally set for Wednesday morning but changed to tomorrow evening because of the deteriorating situation in Lebanon, an Arab League spokesman said.

Syria, increasingly isolated from the other Arab states since its intervention in Lebanon, was expected by diplomatic sources here to boycott the meeting.

Lebanon also was expected to stay away because of President Suleiman Franjeh's sympathy for the Syrian role in his country.

If these two key countries do stay away, diplomats here find it hard to imagine what could come out of the meeting other than a statement urging Syria to leave. Egypt, however, may push for its earlier suggestion that a joint Arab peace-keeping force be sent to Lebanon.

13 Call For Session
The meeting tomorrow was called by the secretary of the Arab League, Gen. Mahmoud Riad with the agreement of 13 out of 20 members—Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Oman, Sudan, Tunisia, Somalia, Mauritania, Morocco, Bahrain and Qatar.

Majority approval did not come until after the leader of the P.L.O., Yashir Arafat sent an urgent message through an aide in Cairo to all 20 members saying Syrian troops were attacking Palestinian forces. Mr. Arafat called for a full-fledged summit meeting of all 20 heads of states.

As the conference was announced, Syrian diplomatic personnel in Cairo were preparing to leave the city following Egypt's order Saturday night expelling them. Egypt also withdrew its entire diplomatic staff from Damascus and closed the embassy to protest a violent attack on it that morning.

The Egyptian move was seen by diplomats here as a straightforward response to a major provocation—the burning and looting of the Egyptian Embassy. Egypt said it was the act of Syrian agents. Damascus said it was done by students.

"They got tired of being slapped around in public, and when they were physically slapped around it proved to be just too much," a Western diplomat said.

Egypt Called a Traitor
The remark was a reference to the verbal beating Egypt has taken from Syria since it signed the second Sinai agreement with Israel in September. Syria said the signing of the separate peace made Egypt a traitor to the Arab cause. Other Arab countries, and particularly the Palestinians, were also critical. Now Egypt is attacking the Syrians over the intervention in Lebanon. Referring to Saturday's incident, today's Egyptian newspapers called the Syrian Baath Party fascist and criticized the Syrians for agreeing last month to extend the mandate of the United Nations peace-keeping forces in the Golan Heights.

And Egypt is mending its fences with the Palestinians. President Anwar el-Sadat announced yesterday that he would allow the Palestine Radio station here to resume broadcasting. It was closed in September for criticizing the Sinai agreement.

Egyptian Government officials have said all along that they would like to mend their fences with Syria as well. It appeared last month that closer relations, sponsored by Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, were about to develop.

But a planned Prime Ministers' meeting in Riyadh was canceled at the last minute, apparently because Syria was insisting on discussing the Sinai agreement. The Foreign Ministers of Kuwait and Syria have been to Cairo and Damascus several times since to try and reschedule the conference, and, in fact, are still optimistically working at it despite Saturday's events.

The Khalde crossroads commands the one road leading out of western Beirut to the highway to Saïda, which were today both closed. During the day, traffic was permitted out of the city, but not in.

Slowly, the forces around Beirut have spread toward the capital, moving into the shantytown beachside village of Uzai' and up to the coastal approaches of the city itself.

It is not always possible to distinguish between the two. The radio of the independent Nasserites yesterday reported that 30 Syrian soldiers had been captured and that 60 had rallied to the side of the Lebanese left.

Yesterday evening the radio of the right-wing Phalangist Party said that two Arab visitors in Damascus, the Libyan Prime Minister, Abdul Salam Jalloud, and the Algerian Education Minister, Abdelkrim Ben Mahmoud, had negotiated a cease-fire in Beirut that was to take effect at 2 P.M. today.

Nerves and Calm on a Lebanese Front

By JAMES M. MARKHAM
Special to The New York Times
RUESSAT SOFAR, Lebanon, June 7—A charred Syrian T-62 tank slumps by the roadside 12 miles east of Beirut, its barrel pointed toward Damascus.
Irregulars from Kamal Jumblatt's Progressive Socialist Party swarm around the wrecked hulk of the Soviet-made tank, which they say they knocked out last night after it clanked into this once-pleasant resort town.
The gunmen are jumpy. They point to the sky, warning of planes. One fires his gun in the air to keep off curiosity-seekers. People run to shade—and seeming safety—of nearby trees.
Entry of Tanks Recalled
One of the gunmen says that six tanks came into this little town, just above Mr. Jumblatt's headquarters town of Aleih, and that one was knocked out as the pack returned from a sortie in the eastern Bekaa Valley.
One Syrian tankman was killed, the irregulars say, and four were wounded. They were reportedly taken to a nearby hospital.
As always in Lebanon, the "battleground" presents a spectacle of urgency and normalcy: often nervous gunmen alongside children playing in lots, women shopping in the sloping mountain-town streets, farmers working in their fields.

And the "battleground" is a blurred one, indeed. Since March, what appear to be Syrian troops have held a strategic crossroads at Khalde, just south of the Beirut airport. The site commands the one road leading down from Aleih to Beirut and the main Saïda-Beirut road, thus giving the Syrians a stranglehold on the capital even though they face possible foes on three sides.
Planes Sweep By
Soon two planes appear, cutting white trails across the summer sky above RueSSat Sofar. Sonic booms shudder in the mountains. The jets are on reconnaissance—and seem to be Israeli.
Then, lower, two Hawker-

Hunter jets appear from the east, looping gracefully over the leftist and Palestinian-held areas around Ain Tura, then over Aleih, then down the sharp declivity that leads to Beirut.
The planes do not seem to strike, but some people scatter into their heavy stone houses.
"The pilots are from Jordan," one gunman says. The accusation is common, though some people believe the planes are piloted by Lebanese who have rallied to the Syrian-sponsored "Vanguards of the Lebanese Army in the Bekaa Valley."
Hard to Get Back
Getting through the Khaide checkpoint this morning was no problem. A bearded soldier cheerfully waved two American journalists past. But returning, toward noon, the journalists, like others, were not permitted to pass.
Picking through a back road, they came down to the ravaged coastal town of Damur, up the Saïda road to another Syrian checkpoint. Soldiers from the renegade Lebanese Arab Army milled about, within slingshot range of the Syrians. A bit off, Lebanese army tanks stood with their guns pointing toward Beirut.
After more than an hour's wait, the two journalists are finally let through. The car picks its way down the coast road—deserted save for occasional Syrian outposts and hopeful beachside orange juice vendors—into the city.

CHINA DEFENSE CHIEF RETAINS HIS POSITION

PEKING, June 7 (Reuters)—China has confirmed that Yeh Chien-ying still holds the key post of Defense Minister.
For months there had been speculation that Mr. Yeh, a 77-year-old deputy chairman of the Communist Party and former associate of the disgraced Teng Hsiao-ping, might have relinquished the job.
Last night Hsinhua, the Chinese press agency, referred to him as Defense Minister in reporting a meeting he had here with Gen. Guy Mery, French Chief of Staff. It was the first time since the campaign against "capitalist roaders" gathered force last January that the press agency had named Mr. Yeh as Defense Minister.
Marshal Yeh, who was ill last year, failed to appear publicly for months as the campaign built up, fueling speculation that the defense portfolio might have gone to Chen Hsi-shen, a Deputy Prime Minister.

India's Delegation to U.N. Rejects Charges of Torture

Special to The New York Times
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., June 7—The Indian delegation rejected as "groundless" today a complaint from the International League for the Rights of Man charging the Indian Government with suppressing individual freedom and permitting torture of political dissidents.
The delegation, in a statement to reporters, said the charges about torture being used as an official policy were the "height of absurdity."
The Indian Government's statement also rejected the League's proposal for a United Nations investigation, saying such an inquiry was a violation of the United Nations Charter provisions prohibiting interference in the internal affairs of states.

BRITISH AIR SHOW BARS ISRAELI JET

Tel Aviv Newspaper Asserts the Organizers Bowed to Saudi Arabian Pressure

Special to The New York Times
LONDON, June 7—The organizers of Britain's principal air show have stirred a controversy by barring an Israeli fighter plane from participating.

The Israelis simply applied too late, according to Desmond Clough, the spokesman for the Society of British Aerospace Companies, the sponsor of the Farnborough Air Show, scheduled for Sept. 5 through 12.

But an official of the Israeli Aircraft Industries said today that the Farnborough representatives agreed on May 25 to allow the plane, the Kfir, to be entered but then reversed that decision two days later. An Israeli newspaper asserted that pressure from Saudi Arabia was to blame.

A report in the Tel Aviv newspaper Maariv last week said Saudi Arabia had warned the British that their lucrative Arab export market for military planes would be jeopardized if the Israeli Kfir were permitted to show its capabilities at Farnborough.

This was denied by the Society of British Aerospace Companies, and two of Britain's most important plane manufacturers, the British Aircraft Corporation and Hawker Siddeley, also said they knew nothing of any Arab pressure.

Supersonic Single-Seater
 The Kfir is a supersonic single-seater that performed well against the Arab-piloted MIG-21's during the Middle East war of October 1973. It is based on the French Dassault airframe and is powered by a General Electric J-79 turbojet engine.

The official of the Israeli Aircraft Industries, which is government-owned, said today that while the final date for entering the Farnborough event was the end of February, he had been notified that the list "would not close until the eve of the show."

"So according to this," said the official, who asked to remain unidentified, "I went to see the Farnborough people."

"This was on May 25, and they were quite happy to see me, and they gave me an affirmative reply and said 'You're welcome.' I reported this to our people in Israel.

"Two days later they wrote a letter in which they went back on what they said before. It stated there is no room for an air show."

The Promoters' View
 Mr. Clough, speaking for the promoters, conceded that late entries were sometimes possible. But he maintained that the Israeli company never had put in a "formal" application to participate.

He said that it would have been impossible to slot the Kfir into the complicated flying program at this late date and that all the exhibition sites for static displays had been taken.

British sales of arms abroad, including planes, are expected to be worth well over $1 billion this year. The value of sales to individual countries are not disclosed, but the Middle Eastern countries, including Israel, are among the biggest buyers.

WALDHEIM VOICES CONCERN ON CYPRUS

Special to The New York Times
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., June 7—The fate of thousands of Greek Cypriots in areas occupied by Turkish forces in northern Cyprus has become a matter of "serious concern," Secretary General Kurt Waldheim warned in a report today to the Security Council.

Access to the Greek Cypriot villages is severely restricted by the Turkish side, he reported. He also said there was a continuous "outflow" of Greek Cypriots that suggested they were leaving their villages under pressure from the Turkish forces that invaded the island in July 1974 and now hold 40 percent of it.

Mr. Waldheim recommended that the Council approve a six-month extension of the 2,322-member United Nations peace-keeping force for Cyprus and said that the parties concerned had agreed to the force's continued presence. A Council meeting to deal with the matter is likely Friday since the present term of the force ends next Tuesday.

Foreign Minister Ioannis Christophides of Cyprus arrived here from Nicosia over the weekend, prepared to push for a full-scale debate of the deteriorating situation instead of a quick, formalized Council meeting to renew the peace force, a procedure favored by the Turkish Cypriots.

His Government wants to push its charges that the Turkish Cypriots have failed to fulfill any of the agreements reached in the last two years through intercommunal talks.

Rains Swell Rivers in Serbia
BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, June 7 (AP)—Rains in the last three days began swelling rivers in Serbia today, flooding settlements and causing extensive damage. Part of Svetozarevo, south of Belgrade, was under water as the Tugomir river burst through a protective dam.

Chile Study Charges Torture Goes On

there had been "a very high number" of arbitrary arrests up to March.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger arrived here today, after stopovers in the Dominican Republic and Bolivia, to join the deliberations of the Organization of American States that began Friday. He is expected to remain until Thursday. The conference is scheduled to last until June 13.

The seven-member human rights commission, a permanent organ of the Organization of American States, said it had been "seriously perturbed" by the refusal of the Chilean Government to reply to written requests for information.

A 162-page statement by the Chilean Foreign Minister, Patricio Carvajal, was attached to the report.

Security Measures Defended

Mr. Carvajal said that the state of siege imposed in September 1973, when President Salvador Allende Gossens was overthrown, and the security measures adopted later were needed to "protect the population" against an international campaign of subversion aimed at overthrowing the military junta.

He maintained that Chileans here, linked to "those who fight against Chile from abroad," had presented distorted information to international agencies as part of an effort to "isolate the military junta and apply moral and economic sanctions."

Mr. Carvajal specifically attacked the Committee for Peace, an ecumenical group of clergymen, lawyers and social workers that provided legal aid to prisoners and their families. It was dissolved last year under Government pressure.

The work of the committee, whose principal legal figure, José Zelaquet, was sent into exile, has been continued by a Roman Catholic "Vicariate of Solidarity" which provides legal aid and economic assistance to the needy.

A lawyer belonging to the vicariate, Hernán Muñoz, was arrested May 12 and has been held without specific charges at the Tres Alamos detention center near this capital.

A government decree issued in May 1975 to regulate arrests under the state of siege, sets a five-day limit on detentions before a prisoner must be submitted to a court or be held by the Minister of Interior.

Another decree issued Jan. 28 states that no arrest or search can be made without a written order from the chief of a security agency. It also requires that prisoners be examined by a physician, with a written report, before entering a detention center.

The human rights commission's report, commenting on the application of these and other decrees, said that many provisions were ignored or violated by the security forces.

"Practically all persons who are detained remain for a specific length of time without the members of their families knowing their whereabouts or their condition, with the Government denying the very fact of their detention," the report said. It added:

"The standards issued by the Chilean Government more or less recently on this subject seem to be intended more to serve as instruments of propaganda rather than as effective measures for the protection of human rights."

The report was drafted in March before President Augusto Pinochet began a policy of accelerating the release of persons held under the state of siege. The release began during a visit by the United States Secretary of the Treasury, William E. Simon, last month. Today 60 people were released, bringing the total to 362.

But church sources said that in this capital alone there were 133 new arrests in April and May, including those of 20 persons, mostly Communist Party members, on April 29, before Mr. Simon's visit.

Political Curbs Noted

The commission's report concluded that "legal provisions have not produced appreciable beneficial effects" and that this was due, in part, to the maintenance of "standards that totally prohibit the activity of political parties" and that substantially restrict liberty of expression.

Antbal Aguilar, a Venezuelan lawyer who is the chairman of the commission, is expected to be present when the foreign ministers debate the report. Some countries represented here, notably Venezuela, Jamaica and Costa Rica, are pushing for a resolution condemning Chile for violations of human rights.

More than 20 cases of alleged killing of prisoners are contained in the report. Among them is that of Oscar Arroyo Yáñez, a lathe operator in Concepción, who was arrested Sept. 26.

According to a statement by his wife, he was brought to his home the next day by security forces.

"My husband was emaciated, pale, talking incoherently," she was quoted as saying. "I helped him wash, he could not do it by himself, and I saw his beaten body. I asked him why it was that way and he said they had hit him a lot."

The report then added: "Arroyo Yáñez was put in the auto again. He was able to say goodbye to his son, and that was the last time they saw him alive."

The report said his body was found on Sept. 29 in a street at Alto Lota, a coal town near Concepción. The death certificate issued at the morgue said the cause of death was "acute anemia" as a result of bullet wounds.

Cocaine Traffic Discussed

SANTA CRUZ, Bolivia, June 7 (UPI)—Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and President Hugo Banzer Suárez of Bolivia agreed today on the necessity of stepped-up efforts to cut off the flow of cocaine from Bolivia.

The agreement was announced in a communiqué that also expressed satisfaction at the high level of understanding and cooperation between the two countries.

The communiqué was issued shortly before Mr. Kissinger's departure for Santiago, Chile, for a meeting of the Organization of American States. It said President Banzer and Mr. Kissinger agreed on the necessity to increase the efforts of both Governments to combat and eradicate the manufacture and traffic of cocaine and other dangerous substances.

Opposition Party in South Korea Beset by Bitter Factional Disputes

By ANDREW H. MALCOLM
Special to The New York Times

SEOUL, South Korea, June 7—South Korea's New Democratic Party—the only remaining major political opposition to the Government of President Park Chung Hee—is severely split and consumed these days with bitter internal factional disputes.

The political squabbling, charges and countercharges within the minority party centered recently on its organization and the role of its president. At one time the disputes even erupted into club-swinging street melees.

But the widening rift is seen by many here as a perhaps inevitable result of years of frustration among minority opposition leaders harassed and hamstrung by Government controls, restrictions, surveillance and, some charge, active intervention.

Whatever the causes, the effect of the fight is to weaken further the democratic alternative to President Park, a former general who led a military group that ousted a civilian Government 15 years ago last month.

The opposition party's difficulties have been chronicled in minute detail daily in the pages of the Government-controlled press here.

Regime's Gains Hailed

However, news coverage of the Government and President Park's Democratic Republican Party has recently been largely limited to the hailing of further achievements, such as the inauguration of a new blast furnace.

The overall result is to contrast sharply the democratic discussion of squabbling politicians with the seemingly planned, orderly accomplishments of incumbent officials.

Under South Korea's present political framework, no one realistically expects the New Democrats ever to elect enough members to control the 218-seat National Assembly.

The 1972 Constitution authorizes President Park to appoint 73 members to three-year terms. Sixty-eight elected members belong to President Park's party. There are five vacancies, 17 independents and 56 New Democrats.

"Keeping the opposition controlled and divided," said one Westerner here, "gives Park the facade of democracy as well as a sometimes negative example."

Even the two parties' headquarters appear to provide the desired contrast. The Democratic Republican Party is installed overlooking Seoul on a high hill in a modern, tree-shaded structure with clean corridors and shiny steel filing cabinets.

The New Democrats, on the other hand, have office space in downtown Seoul in a tattered green four-story building over a bakery. They are reportedly several months behind in rent.

The office's windows are smashed, a result of a recent party clash that saw the current president, Kim Young Sam, depart hastily through a second-floor window.

Mr. Kim, a 51-year-old political veteran who has hung several pictures of men of the Kennedy family in his home, believes that the South Korean Central Intelligence Agency is largely responsible for fomenting the party's troubles.

That's what the agency is for," he said.

Mr. Kim said that at least twice in recent weeks his party's officials had sought the help of the police, who are usually ubiquitous here in their aquabulous shirts and visored helmets.

Policemen Arrived Late

But he said, policemen came too late to break up intraparty fights, or did not appear at all.

"This is a strange development in a country where people are arrested for spitting and littering," he said.

Others here believe those involved in the violence may have been instigators from outside the party.

Within his own party, Mr. Kim is opposed by five other factional leaders, who charge that he became "dictatorial" during his first two-year term.

"We are against all such dictators," said Lee Chul Seung, one of the five. "We must cultivate free political institutions even within our own party."

"The situation is hopeless," Mr. Lee continued. "The party has lost face. We must rebuild it. It is paralyzed now."

On May 25 the group opposed to Mr. Kim barred him and his followers from the site of the party's national convention and elected a group leadership. Mr. Kim and his faction repaired to the party headquarters and held their own meeting, at which he was elected to a new term as party president. Each faction sought endorsement of its stand from the Central Election Management Committee.

Neither Meeting Approved

That body consists of nine members. Three are appointed by President Park, three are chosen by the National Assembly, which is controlled by President Park, and three are appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Justice appointed by President Park.

After almost six hours of deliberation, the committee decided that neither New Democratic convention had been valid. The decision will help prolong the dispute, possibly resulting in time-consuming law suits.

Both sides have begun talking of cooling off periods that could lead to negotiations to broaden the party's leadership, perhaps with Mr. Kim's ouster or perhaps with a new group of party vice presidents. Mr.

Kim predicts that he will be re-elected.

But more important to some, the situation reveals the frayed fabric of what has long been a fractious, feisty political party dating back, under various names, to the early post-World War II days.

"Today you can't trust any one or any politics," said one Asian. "Ever since the military took over, people don't seem to trust each other. You listen very carefully speak frankly. He can't try to trap seeds of distrust. New Democrats have listened souls."

QUAKE FROM PACIFIC HITS CENTRAL MEXICO

MEXICO CITY, June 7 (AP)—An earthquake in the Pacific off Acapulco struck central Mexico today causing panic but only slight damage. There were no reported casualties.

Buildings in the capital shook for more than a minute. Electric power was interrupted for half an hour in some sections, causing huge traffic jams.

The walls of some old adobe buildings tumbled down, and window panes shattered. Fire officials said half a dozen persons were trapped in elevators and three small fires were quickly snuffed out.

The University of Mexico observatory said the earthquake measured 6.2 on the Richter scale, strong enough to cause severe damage in populated areas.

The police in Acapulco and Veracruz said residents of those cities felt only a slight tremor.

Body of Murdered Bolivian Flown to Mexico for Burial

BUENOS AIRES, June 7 (Reuters)—The body of former President Juan José Torres of Bolivia, who was murdered here last week, was flown today to Mexico after the Bolivian Government cancelled plans for burial in La Paz.

General Torres' widow, Emma Ubleas de Torres, issued a statement saying that President Luis Echeverría Alvarez of Mexico had offered to permit burial in his country.

Mrs. Torres, her daughter and three sons accompanied the body aboard a Mexican Airlines plane.

The all-747 airline across the North Atlantic and the Pacific.

That fact should make things easy for you. Not only in choosing your airline, but in putting your trip together. And enjoying it.

To Europe this summer, we'll be the only U.S. airline flying only big, comfortable 747s across the North Atlantic.

If you're going to be crossing the wide Pacific, we'll have nothing but comfort for you there, too. Every flight will be a 747.

When we go to Tokyo from Los Angeles and New York, we use our new 747 SP. Which gives us (and you) the only non-stops to Japan from those cities. Which also, naturally, results in the fastest flights to Tokyo from those cities.

At Pan Am, you don't pay a penny extra for having the world's largest fleet of scheduled 747s at your beck and call.

And speaking of calling, why not call your travel agent.

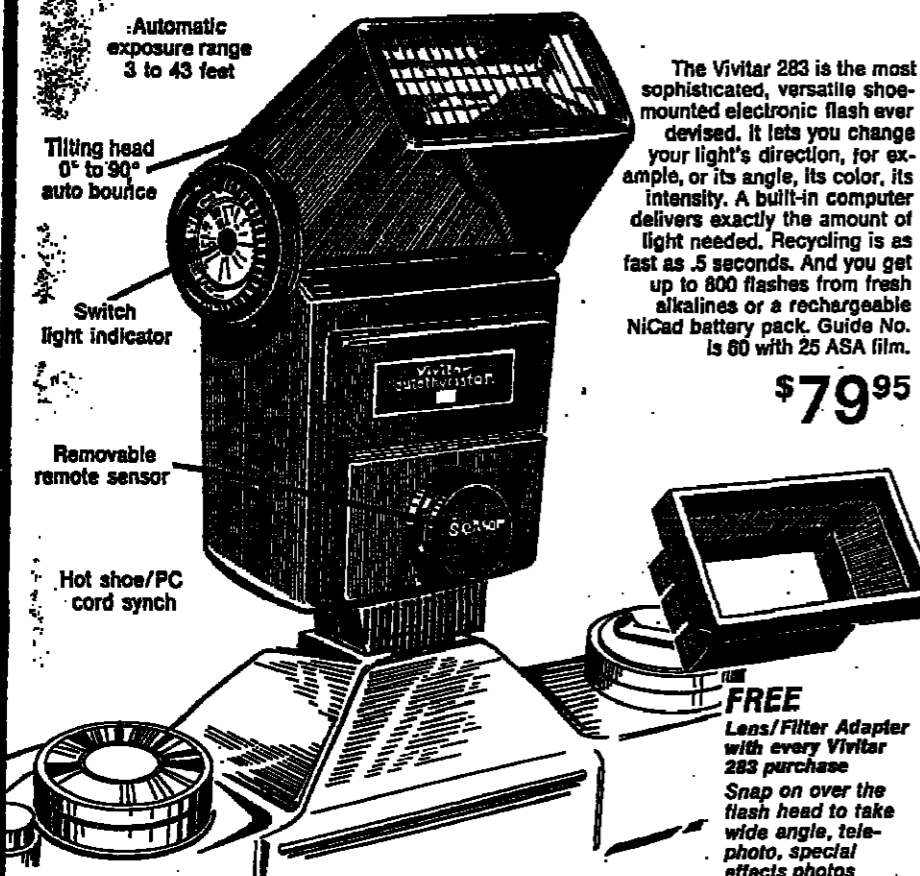

He'll give you our schedules and work out your trip with you. And most likely that won't cost you a penny extra either.

Architects Have a Blueprint for Habitat

Special to The New York Times
VANCOUVER, British Columbia, June 7—Architecture has been little discussed at the week-old United Nations Conference on Human Settlements here, but pressure is growing to include a provision for the quality of design in the final declaration to be adopted later this week.

Early in the conference, which is known as Habitat, Jai Rattan Bihalla, of India, the president of the International Union of Architects, charged that architects were being "neglected" in the official proceedings.

Two delegations, Iran and Greece, have formally proposed resolutions on design, and the United States is "solidly behind any thing in this area," according to David Mesler, Assistant Secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development and a member of the delegation.

Both of the resolutions proposed as amendments to the conference's overall declaration are strongly oriented away from the approach generally associated with modern architecture and urban renewal.

Focus on Quality of Life

The Iranian delegation has proposed that the conference state its commitment to design "related to the particular circumstances of time and space, and based on consideration of the human scale." This phrase is seen as an argument in favor of modest, vernacular architecture and as opposed to the often abstract quality of much modern design, particularly as expressed in government-built housing.

"We were very concerned that the conference was thinking only in materialistic terms, not in terms of the quality of life," said Zaven J. Simonian, Deputy Housing Minister of Iran and a conference delegate. "At one point, one phrase of the original resolutions said that if there are policy choices, they should be made on the basis of cost. We changed that to say on the basis of social benefit as well."

The change is considered significant. The original resolutions, which were drafted before the conference began and which have been the subject of intense debate for the last week, concentrate on land use, public participation in the planning process, and the distribution of resources to underdeveloped countries. These are issues that are as concerned with politics as with planning, so the attempt on the part of Iran and other governments to insert design provisions into the final declaration is viewed as a significant departure.

A Film From Yemen

Greece's delegation, which issued a statement saying it "deplores the lack of any mention of the sociopsychological requirement to be granted for a harmonious urban life," has proposed an amendment similar to Iran's. It says that while planning new human settlements or restructuring existing ones, "a high priority should be given to the promotion of optimal and creative conditions of human existence." It goes on to urge "human scale," and "the creation of chances of human encounters and the elimination of urban concepts promoting human isolation."

Both the Iranian and the Greek resolutions reflect the general mood of the conference, which has been strongly in the direction of smaller structures, architecture more concerned with human use, and with the native traditions of particular regions.

The conference has thus implicitly rejected the all-pervasive approach of much modern architecture and planning, in which technology and abstract forms were major determinants of design. This attitude was expressed, for example, in a film brought to the conference by Yemen; it admitted its Government's failure in its attempt to introduce Western-style modern technological methods.

The modern buildings, the film said, "had thin walls, were hot in summer, cold in winter and expensive to maintain." It explained how the small Arab country reversed its policy and encouraged the reuse of its traditional mud-block building methods.

"We recommend that the architects explore thoroughly the local traditions before venturing into any modernistic kinds of construction," the film said. The same attitude was expressed in documents offered by the International Union of Architects and the Iranian Government. The union proposed a "habitat charter" calling for the right of all human beings to "a habitable space conducive to good health and exclusive to personal use."

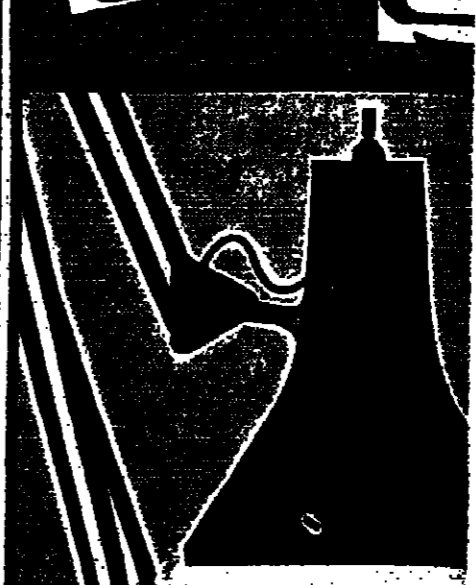

The Government of Iran has been circulating what it calls the "habitat bill of rights." It is an elaborate, book-length presentation that advocates the design of dwellings based on the values and living patterns of residents rather than buildings which force occupants to alter their life styles. It also advocates the retention of pedestrian precincts in urban areas, and the harmonic relationship of architecture to its surroundings.

U. S. Is Learning From Setbacks Suffered at U.N. Labo

By A. H. RASKIN
Special to The New York Times
GENEVA, June 6—The United States, which has made restoration of respect for "due process" a mainstay of its campaign to banish politics from the International Labor Organization, is learning once again that reliance on the elastic rules of the agency can open up a bottomless pit of new frustrations.

That lesson emerged forcefully from the reversal last Friday of the initial victory the American delegation had won on barring the Palestine Liberation Organization from the I.L.O.'s 132-nation World Employment Conference, now meeting here. Under the constitution and standing orders of the labor group, its governing body had supposedly settled the issue irrevocably a week ago by voting to exclude the P.L.O. But, after interminable wrangles, in which I.L.O. parliamentarians were called on for dozens of constitutional interpretations, the Palestinians were in, not out, and the American victory had slipped away on a flood tide of legalisms. The same parliamentarians, who had originally declared that the first vote was not subject to either review or appeal, had no difficulty in deciding that "new elements" in the situation justified bending the rules to authorize a new ballot. This time the Palestinians came away with a 31-to-23 victory, as against a 24-to-23 defeat the first time around.

Request From Arab League
The "new elements" involved two letters. One was from the League of Arab States formally requesting that the full conference make the decision on whether to admit the Palestinians as observers, a status they got last year in all regular meetings of the I.L.O. The other was a demand by the Organization of African Unity that all other liberation movements ride in with the P.L.O.

No one seriously pretended that either letter added any new dimension to the question. The only new elements were that the same people who had been doing all the shouting in the first place were now shouting louder," commented a United States official.

The decisive factor in the turnaround was fear that the Arabs, backed by their allies in the third world and the Soviet bloc, would boycott or otherwise disrupt the employment conference. In the end that fear proved more potent than concern among I.L.O. leaders that a reversal might make the United States pull out immediately, rather than wait until November, 1977, the deadline set by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger for evidence that the organization has "depoliticized" its activities.

Up to the Challenge
The test for the I.L.O. secretariat was how to engineer a second vote on a basis that would not too flagrantly affront the Americans in their insistence on a return to "due process." The organization's parliamentarians were equal to the challenge. As a sop to the United States and those who had voted with it in excluding the Palestinians, the I.L.O. officers came up with a compromise under which the issue went back to the governing body, instead of going to the full conference. That escape hatch provided some solace for the Americans on two counts. One was that the Palestinians were sure to win by a vastly more impressive margin if all the delegates were allowed to vote. The other was that floor action to override the governing body would advance a long-standing effort by the developing countries to downgrade the executive group's power and establish the "absolute sovereignty" of the full conference. The United States and nine other industrialized nations most of which voted with it against the Palestinians, have guaranteed seats in the governing body. All the other 122 nations have to vie for the 18 remaining government seats. By contrast, in the full conference countries that pay for only 1.3 percent of the I.L.O. budget command a majority of the floor votes. The United States alone pays a quarter of the budget, to which contributions are set according to gross national product.

Doomed to Lose
With the end of the fight over the P.L.O.—one the United States knew it was doomed to lose—the American Government, employer and labor representatives hope that moderates in the African, Asian and Latin American delegations will join in an attempt to suppress explosive outside issues and thus permit the conference to concentrate on the only slightly less explosive arguments inherent in trying to harmonize the views of the rich and poor nations on creation of jobs and redistribution of income.

But a condemnation of Chile introduced by Communist nations from the Soviet Union, Eastern Europe, France and Cuba, in disregard of a general understanding that all groups would keep the agenda clear of such items, has already caused the United States workers delegates to call for a boycott of the resolutions committee. The Americans are also committed to walk out of the hall whenever the Palestinians address the conference. It will be on the other side was reflected in an abortive Mexican attempt this weekend to upset the standing orders in a way that would make it easy to get any world that controversial resolution on the floor without reference to a screening panel.

All these crosscurrents have made the Americans begin private conversations looking to the possibility of speeding their departure and building a rival labor organization in conjunction with the Common Market nations and Norway, Sweden, Japan, Canada and Australia. The vehicle would be an attachment to the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, which is already deeply involved in matters of employment and trade similar to those that concern the I.L.O. The idea of switching allegiance has strong partisans in both the American worker and employer delegations here.

'A Downhill Slope'
"Whether we go or stay, the I.L.O. is on a downhill slope," said one United States unionist. "The O.E.C.D. is already heavily involved in north-south dialogue and it has more authority to resolve their conflicts than the I.L.O. has. It is a good place for us to be." The advantage of a home in the O.E.C.D. is that it is much more a private province of the Western democracies than is the polarized I.L.O. It consists of 24 industrial nations, the very nations the United States is trying to group around it in its battle to end use of the I.L.O. as a launching pad for anti-American disadvantages address the conference. It will be on the other side was reflected in an abortive Mexican attempt this weekend to upset the standing orders in a way that would make it easy to get any world that controversial resolution on the floor without reference to a screening panel. ## Why wait up to 90 days to earn 5 1/4% interest

County Federal Savings and Loan pays interest on your savings every month — on all accounts, passbook or savings certificate. So you never have to wait up to 90 days to enjoy the interest you've earned.

If you now have a passbook account that requires you to wait till the end of a quarter, County Federal suggests you consider the advantages of a County Federal 90-day Savings Certificate. You can earn 5 1/4% interest on your savings instead of the 5 1/4% (or perhaps 5%) you now receive. You don't have to tie your money up for a long period of time, because your funds are available to you without any interest penalty every 90 days. (Renewal of your certificate can be made automatic, subject to your approval.)

With a County Federal 90-day Certificate, your savings not only earn a higher rate but your interest is compounded daily. And you can draw your interest every month — or leave it in your account to earn more interest. If your savings and interest remain in your account a full year, your effective annual yield is actually 6%!

Increase the interest you now get every quarter with a County Federal 90-day Savings Certificate. Minimum deposit — $500.

NOTE: Government regulations require a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawals from Time Savings Accounts. Interest on the amount withdrawn may not exceed the passbook rate, and interest for 90 days is forfeited.

In 90 days, County Federal can pay you 5 3/4%!

Soviet Official Meets With Tito On Parley for European Reds

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE
Special to The New York Times
BELGRADE, Yugoslavia June 5—In an apparent effort to break a two-year deadlock delaying a conference of European Communist parties, a senior Soviet negotiator conferred with President Tito of Yugoslavia today on "problems facing the international workers' movement."

The Soviet official, Konstantin F. Katushev, is a secretary of the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party in charge of Soviet Communist relations with foreign ruling Communist parties.

Yesterday, Mr. Katushev was received here by the general secretary of the League of Communists, the Communist Party of Yugoslavia, Stane Dolanc. The conversation was described as "long and open"—diplomatic phrasing implying major disagreements.

The main problem is that Yugoslavia and several other like-minded parties fear that the Soviet Union is embarking on a campaign to swallow up all European Communist nations, doing away with national identities within the Soviet bloc and making Moscow the capital of the entire region.

Yugoslavia has long demanded a number of concessions from Moscow as a condition for Yugoslav participation in any European Communist summit conference.

Summary of Actions Taken by the Supreme Court

Special to The New York Times
 WASHINGTON, June 7—The Supreme Court took the following actions today:

ALIENS
 Without having heard arguments on the question and without issuing a written opinion, the Court ruled that both the Federal Government and the states may exclude resident aliens from serving on juries. The Court simply affirmed, without comment, the decision of a lower court that had previously ruled on the question, in a case involving both Federal and Maryland laws limiting jury service to citizens. (Perkins v. Smith, No. 73-1915).
 Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall stated that they would have heard arguments on the matter, rather than deciding it summarily.

BANKS
 By 8 to 1 vote, the Court ruled that when a national banking association is sued for allegedly violating the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, the association may be sued only in the district where the association is established. Specifically, the Court held that in such lawsuits, the narrow venue provisions of the National Bank Act apply, rather than the broad venue provisions of the Securities Exchange Act. Potter Stewart wrote the Court's opinion, which was based on statutory construction. John Paul Stevens was the sole dissenter. (Radzantower v. Touche, Ross & Co., No. 75-288).

BIRTH CONTROL
 At the request of New York State, the Court agreed to consider the constitutionality of a state statute that seeks to impose the following limits on the sale of nonprescription contraceptives: forbidding anyone but doctors to sell contraceptives to persons under 16; forbidding anyone but doctors of pharmacies to sell contraceptives to other persons; prohibiting pharmacies from advertising or displaying contraceptives.
 A three-judge Federal court declared the statute unconstitutional, and enjoined the state from enforcing the first provision, regarding sale of contraceptives to people under 16. It also enjoined the enforcement of the other provisions but stayed the injunction pending appeal. (Carey v. Population Services International, No. 75-443).

CIVIL RIGHTS
 The Court upheld the validity of a qualifying test given to applicants for the District of Columbia police, over challenges that the test discriminated against blacks on the basis of race, in violation of both statutory and constitutional provisions, by excluding a disproportionately high number of blacks. The Court said that disproportionate impact on one race does not, by itself, "trigger the rule that racial classifications are to be subjected to the strictest scrutiny and are justifiable only by the weightiest of considerations." Justices Brennan and Marshall dissented. Justice Stewart joined only part of the majority opinion. (Washington v. Davis, No. 74-1492). (News article, Page 1)

CONSUMER
 Ruling unanimously, the Court held that a passenger who is "bumped" from an airplane flight because of overbooking may bring a common law tort suit against the airline based on allegedly fraudulent misrepresentation by the airline, arising from failure to let the would-be passenger know of its overbooking practices. The passenger in whose case the court acted was Ralph Nader, the consumer advocate. (Nader v. Allegheny Airlines, No. 75-455). (News article, this page)

ELECTIONS
 The Court agreed to review

High Court Lets Nader Sue Airline for Overbooking Flight

WASHINGTON, June 7 (AP)—The Supreme Court ruled today that Ralph Nader, the consumer advocate, could sue an airline that had "bumped" him from a flight because it had sold more tickets than it had seats.

The decision was a victory for Mr. Nader's battle to end the airline practice of overbooking flights as a hedge against passengers who make reservations but fail to show up.

The Supreme Court in a unanimous opinion, ordered the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, which had refused jurisdiction over the case, to decide whether Mr. Nader had presented enough evidence to support his claim for damages.

The appeals court had ruled that Mr. Nader's claim should be heard by the Civil Aeronautics Board, the Federal agency that regulates the airlines, rather than by the courts. The board has established procedures to compensate passengers who are victims of airline overbooking practices.

Mr. Nader filed the suit after he was "bumped" from an Allegheny Airlines flight from Washington to Hartford, Conn., on April 28, 1972. He declined an offer by the airline to refund $34.21.

 He sued for damages, charging Allegheny with fraudulent misrepresentations and violation of the nondiscrimination requirement of the Federal Aviation Act.
 About 83,000 persons were "bumped" from airline flights in 1972 and about 76,000 were told flights had been overbooked in 1973.

ENVIRONMENT
 With Justice Stewart and William H. Rehnquist dissenting, the Court ruled that Federal installations that discharge air of water pollutants are not required to obtain state permits, even where state requirements are part of federally approved environment programs.

The court, with Byron R. White writing for the majority, reasoned that states may regulate Federal installations only when Congress has given "clear and unambiguous" authorization for such regulation, and that the air and water pollution laws do not contain this kind of authorization. (Hancock v. Train, No. 74-220; E.P.A. v. State Water Resources Control Board, No. 74-1435).

FEDERAL COURTS
 The Court agreed at the request of the Illinois Attorney General to review a lower Federal court ruling striking down as unconstitutional the Republican Party's system for allocating delegates to the party's Delaware State convention and to the Republican National Convention. (Delaware Republican State Committee v. Redfearn, No. 75-1462).

High Court Lets Nader Sue Airline for Overbooking Flight

LABOR
 Reversing the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, the Court held that the City of Charlotte, N.C., did not violate the 14th Amendment's Equal Protection Clause when it refused to make payroll deductions for union dues of its firemen. (City of Charlotte v. Firefighters, No. 75-250).

Justice Marshall wrote the opinion; all members joined except Justice Stewart, who concurred only in the judgment.

PRISONS
 Over a strong dissent by Justice Rehnquist, joined by Warren E. Burger and Lewis F. Powell Jr., the Court declined to hear a plea by Texas prison officials contending basically that a Federal judge in Texas was wrong to allow the United States to intervene as a plaintiff in a civil rights case by some Texas state prisoners. (Estelle v. Justice, No. 75-928).

REGULATORY AGENCIES
 With Justice White writing a unanimous opinion, the Court held that the Federal Power Commission, in ruling on a power company's proposed wholesale rates, has jurisdiction to consider allegations that the wholesale rates are discriminatory and noncompetitive when considered in relation to that company's retail rates. (F.P.C. v. Conway Corp., No. 75-342).

WATER RIGHTS
 The Court upheld unanimously an injunction that bans ranchers from pumping water to the extent that the pumping would cause the water to drop below a certain level in an underground pool in Nevada that is occupied by an unusual type of fish known as Devil's Hole pupfish. The underground pool is in the Devil's Hole Cavern on Federal Land in Nevada; the cavern was reserved as a national monument in 1952 in an effort to preserve the fish. (Cappaert v. United States, No. 74-1107).

200 Families Are Homeless as Snake River, Swollen by Dam Break, Ravages 2 Idaho Towns

AYRES Jr. June 7—The town out of its that broke versal new rampaged southeastern leaving an- nies home-repair and more than 50,000 acres silted over or badly eroded. To the north of Idaho Falls, cleanup operations were beginning in the hard-hit communities of Sugar City, Rexburg and Roberts. To the south, the water was still too deep for any cleanup, particularly in Firth and Blackfoot, the two towns hit today.

Idaho Falls escaped serious damage as the flood crest passed through its downtown late last night. Thousands of volunteers converged on the waterfront and constructed sandbag dikes in a successful effort to hold back the surging, debris-choked water. Officials were hopeful late this afternoon that the worst was over.

The waters are now headed for the reservoir at American Falls and the people down there think it should contain them. Phil Cogan, an official of the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration, said. The collapsed dam, situated about 30 miles northeast of here near the town of Teton, split open at midday Saturday. The cause of the break was under investigation.

The dam was built by the Federal Government to irrigate farms in the Idaho Falls region. One of the best potato-growing areas in the United States. Work had only recently been completed on the 300-foot-high, 3,000-foot-wide structure, which was made primarily of earth and rock. Environmentalists had fought the project, arguing that it would interfere with wildlife and that its location was in an earthquake area, or fault zone.

Initial investigations into the cause of the split uncovered the fact that leakage occurred at the base of the structure for several days before the collapse. At a news conference here last night, Harold Horton, an Assistant Secretary of the Interior, said a complete study of the collapse was under way. Some of the investigators, he added, were from private enterprises.

When the dam collapsed, a wall of mud and debris as high as a house and as wide as a football field swept southward. Residents of towns and cities in the path of the flood had already been informed by radio and police officials that the dam was leaking and might split open, but the warning did not come in time for most to save their possessions.

One of us heard on the radio that the dam had broken and we just got into the car and drove up to the top of that hill above town," Mrs. Charles Miller, a motel operator at Rexburg, said. "Then we watched it sweep through. It was carrying houses and trees and cows and cars—just everything. It was terrible." The water flooded every room shortly after daybreak yesterday, it left an inch layer of silt on almost everything it had touched. Henry Wagon, a Rexburg banker, decided to go up rather than out of Rexburg when word of the break came. He moved to arofa and waited. Mr. Wagon rode out the flood safely, however, and began clearing up as soon as the waters began to subside. According to disaster officials, few residents or merchants in the area had flood insurance. However, some will probably be eligible for Federal rebuilding loans at lowered interest rates. Many of the homeless had moved in with relatives or friends while others are living in dormitories in schools, Federal and state agencies are rounding up rental apartments and preparing to move in a number of mobile homes. The Red Cross and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the predominant denomination in this area, are gathering clothing and food and serving as clearinghouses for missing persons reports. Red Cross officials said today "a number" of the missing were beginning to turn up. Joint Panel Planned WASHINGTON, June 7—Secretary of the Interior Thomas S. Kleppe will join with Gov. Cecil D. Andrus of Idaho in naming a blue ribbon panel of nongovernment engineering investigators to fix responsibility for the cause of the Teton dam break, the Interior Department said today.

Zoos Using Birth Control to Stop Overpopulation of Their Big Cats

Chuma, a Bengal tiger and mother of 19 cubs, had a time release contraceptive capsule, above in a test tube, implanted beneath the skin over her left shoulder, circle.

By SETH S. KING
Special to The New York Times
BROOKFIELD, Ill., June 5 — Chuma, one of the Brookfield Zoo's most productive mothers, was lying in her cage, unaware that she represents yet another ecological paradox.

While the world's wild lions, tigers, and leopards are being killed off by the inroads of man, their well-cared-for cousins, in captivity are reproducing with such abandon that there is no more room in the country's zoos and wildlife parks for them.

As a result, the big cats in many of the country's larger zoos are now experiencing birth control, man's means of checking his own population. On May 23, Chuma, a stunning bengal tiger who has produced 19 cubs in the 14 years she has been at the Brookfield Zoo, had a time-release contraceptive capsule implanted beneath the skin over her left shoulder.

Last Thursday morning her sister Frem, who has borne 25 cubs at Brookfield, was lured into a confinement cage and also received an implanted contraceptive. And last fall, both of Brookfield's adult male lions underwent vasectomies.

No Alternatives
The curators at Brookfield, which is in west suburban Chicago, had no acceptable alternative. The zoo is one of the country's largest, but its cat cages and adjoining grottoes were full. No other reputable zoo or wildlife park wanted more cubs, and the cubs kept arriving with persistent regularity. What's more, the big cats eat as much as 15 pounds of raw meat a day.

"We're caught in this painful paradox," said Dr. George Rabb, director of the zoo. "The big cats in the wilds of Africa and India and even in Siberia are being decimated by the pressures of man. But in the world's zoos, the captive animals, with the exception of the cheetah, are reproducing beautifully, twice as fast as they do in nature.

Even if Brookfield and other large zoos had the resources to train their 200-bred cats to survive in the wild and could afford to ship them back, there is so little room left in the natural habitats that they could not exist, Dr. Rabb said.

Transfers Take Time
And even the overpopulation among the country's big cats is ensnared in Federal red tape. If some other zoo did want tiger, leopard, or jaguar cubs, the Federal Endangered Species Act requires so much paper work that it takes up to five months to make a transfer, Dr. Rabb said, and often, by that time, more cubs have been born.

Three years ago, when commercial safari parks were proliferating, there was a demand for lions and tigers.

"But their own cats have been breeding impressively," Dr. Rabb said. "Most of them are full up now and some are having financial troubles and couldn't take more animals anyway."

In the wild, large female cats do not come back into heat until they have reared their litters, and that usually takes two years, he said. "But in the easier life of captivity, it seems that as soon as a female lion or tiger weans her cubs, she's in season again. They produce three to five cubs in a litter, after a gestation period of three and a half to four and a half months, and we've had female cats producing litters every nine months."

Dr. Rabb said that the zoo had tried separating females in heat from the males, but that it no longer had the space nor enough keepers to make this work.

"With the lions, we slipped up twice and both times we got cubs," he said. "One of those times, the keeper insisted he'd left the door between the cages open a foot, but that the big male lion got through there somehow."

At the New York Zoological Society's Bronx Zoo, there has been enough room to make separation work. But the directors are considering starting birth control programs with their big cats.

The San Diego Zoo has been trying all methods — separation, vasectomies on male lions and contraceptive hormone drugs on female tigers and leopards.

At the Milwaukee County Zoo most of the big female cats, except the cheetahs and snow leopards, which do not reproduce well in captivity, are being given contraceptives.

"We started with a male and two female lions and we've already had seven cubs out of the pride," said Gene Spindel, the Milwaukee zoo's director.

The greatest pressures in the wild are on the Siberian tigers. But while there are at best only 200 of them left in natural habitats, the zoos in the world now list more than 600 in their "stud books." Last year they listed 539 bengal tigers in captivity, of which 289 were in American zoos. Of those, 103 were only a year old.

"Don't Come Back"

"We're saturated with Siberian tigers while they're disappearing in the wild," Mr. Spindel said. "We got up to eight of them and now have five out on loans to other zoos. Frankly, we hope they don't come back, because we don't know where we'd put them if they did."

The implanting of contraceptive capsules in females, a technique developed two years ago by Dr. C. W. Gray, senior veterinarian at the National Zoological Park/Smithsonian Institution in Washington and Dr. U. S. Seal of the University of Minnesota, is a simple, virtually painless procedure, once the animal is confined in a squeeze cage or is tranquilized.

The capsules are an inch and a half long and contain melengestrol acetate, a synthetic hormone. They can be inserted under any part of the female's skin. The small incision can be closed immediately.

"It is designed to inhibit ovulation and will be effective, we hope, for about three years," said Dr. Dan Laughlin, Brookfield's chief veterinarian. "It takes me only a minute to do it, and it has no behavioral effect on the females at all. They carry on normally, except they don't become pregnant."

Living Proof

The vasectomies have had no behavioral effects either, Dr. Laughlin said.

In confirmation of this, Lord Sparks, Brookfield's 13-year-old African lion, was observed in the outdoor grotto enjoying all the pleasures of relaxed family living, except no more as a result. "The lion's behavior is difficult to analyze, but it finished laughing, moved a paw, and quickly tucked its tail. We're sure it's a living proof of the effectiveness of the procedure."

Nevada Pupfish Have Their Day in Court and Win

WASHINGTON, June 7 (UPI) — The one-inch pupfish, which has battled nature to survive 10,000 years in a Nevada cavern, won a unanimous Supreme Court ruling today that assures its water will not be drawn away.

The decision, made by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, limits the rights of ranchers around Devil's Hole National Monument to pump water for irrigation from an underground table that also feeds the fish's limestone cavern.

Mr. Burger's ruling was a defeat for Francis and Marilyn Cappaerts, who said they had a right to pump enough water to irrigate their 12,000-acre, $7 million ranch near Devil's Hole.

While the Cappaerts can pump some water from the underground table, the Supreme Court affirmed a lower court ruling that requires the Devil's Hole spring to be kept at a level high enough to assure the survival of 200 pupfish in their only known home on earth.

The Cappaerts obtained a license from Nevada to pump water as needed. The United States intervened in Federal Court, contending that it acquired implied rights to protect the water source for the pupfish when President Harry S. Truman declared Devil's Hole a national monument in 1952.

The pupfish feed on algae that grows on a shelf in the limestone cavern. When the water level drops below the shelf, the fish cannot reach the algae. After the Cappaerts began pumping in 1968, the water level fell each year until the algae supply was threatened.

Lawyers for the Cappaerts told the Supreme Court it was facing a conflict between two endangered species — pupfish and Nevada ranchers.

Mr. Burger rejected their arguments, saying that when the United States acquires land in the public domain, it also may acquire an implied right to enough water supplies to maintain public lands for the purposes intended.

Clearly, Mr. Burger said, Devil's Hole was designated a national monument to preserve the pupfish and thus the Cappaerts could not be allowed to endanger them.

New York
ges self-im-

among blacks, beginning with the schools.
This new direction for Mr.
Jackson and his organization has been hailed by blacks generally, but it also has stirred much controversy and is a main topic of conversation at cocktail parties and in the living rooms of many blacks, as well as some whites.
Essentially, Mr. Jackson feels that black schools are in a chaotic condition, with drugs rampant, discipline lacking and students completely out of control.
Student dress—platform shoes, big hats, the "Super Fly" look for boys and revealing clothes for girls—is distracting, and student language is deplorable and intolerable, he said.
"There can be no learning in that kind of atmosphere. It must be changed and it must be changed by blacks," Mr.
Jackson said in an interview.
"Respect, responsibility and morality must be brought back into the school, and parents must take back their rightful place as employer of all those connected with the school in order to affect the necessary change. Parents should provide children with motivation, discipline, care, love and chastisement."

Mr. Jackson has selected 10 high schools in Chicago as models for his program. He has also moved to establish the program in Washington, Detroit, Los Angeles and Gary, Ind. He has met with the 10 principals as well as the school superintendents, district superintendents, parent councils, student leaders and clergymen near the schools. Members of his staff are coordinating the setting up of the machinery to work out details to implement the program, he said.
Even those who questioned

the program agreed with Mr.
Jackson's analysis and conclusion. They agreed with his goals. But they were concerned that Mr. Jackson would not implement the program, that he would soon find another issue to interest him. Furthermore, they felt he was putting too much of the blame on the victims, and that, politically, his crusade would detract from the fight against racism and give whites the feeling that they no longer had a responsibility to such victims.
Thomas N. Todd, a Chicago lawyer and former assistant to Mr. Jackson, agreed with the program. But he said that instead of starting in the school, Mr. Jackson should "leave the classroom and go to the living room."

In the interview, Mr. Jackson said parents were the foundation for education, and that, "if they didn't have babies, there would be no schools; if they didn't pay taxes, there would be no schools."
Mr. Todd said that the family was considered a tree: "Children are only the branches and if the root is diseased you don't correct it by trimming the leaves, although it is easier to deal with leaves than the roots."
Sarah S. Austin, vice-president of the National Urban Coalition, said that blacks must be careful "not to super-impose white middle class standards on the black family." She said Mr.

Jackson's program assumes that "blacks have the advantages of middle class whites that permit them to be home to supervise their children."
"We must not put ourselves in the position of perpetuating old stereotypes of blaming the victims. I admire the challenge to black parents, but they need more guidance on how this is to be done. Given the peculiar hardships black families are faced to exist under, it is important for black leadership to help public and private sectors to make commitments and resources needed to achieve these objectives," she commented.
The most vocal critic of Mr.

Jackson has been Millie J. Hardy, a member of the Washington City Council. She said she was concerned about Mr. Jackson's commitment to such a program, declaring, "he has a history of stirring people up and leaving them hanging."
"Mr. Jackson merely wants to be a star. His organization, what there is of it, is suffering and people in Chicago are distasteful with him. He has no real success there, and now he's moving on," Mrs. Hardy remarked.
"He is handsome and dashing, but he is nobody's savior, he is too hit-and-miss. He goes into a few schools, he impresses a lot of kids and turns a lot of people on at first. Then he finds something else to do.

The Outlook:
The Attorney General continues to look for a case for the Justice Department to enter although none is evident at this time. President Ford will soon advance to an increasingly receptive Congress his legislative proposal to limit busing, while proponents of busing will almost certainly challenge the constitutionality of any such law that is passed.
Civil rights groups, on the other hand, are trying to figure out how to carry school desegregation forward. School enrollment figures for 1974 show that more than half the black children in the South were attending schools where the majority of students were white, and fewer than 10 percent were attending all black schools.
In the North, where cities are losing major chunks of their white populations, the record is much more dismal.
The fact that cities themselves are becoming more segregated, often resulting in segregated schools, has led some lawyers to ask if desegregated education is a "right for which there is no remedy."
Judges in Richmond and Detroit sought to remedy this situation by joining urban and suburban school districts and busing across town lines.
The Supreme Court, however, opposed that approach and ruled that unless it could be shown that the suburban districts had helped create the problem, they could not be made to participate in its solution.
Last month, however, a three-judge Federal Court in Wilmington, Del., ordered Wilmington's mostly black schools to merge with the mostly white schools in 11 suburban districts. The order is scheduled to go into effect in September 1977.

LET'S SHOW
THE FLYING COLORS OF THE UNITED STATES

From Flag Day, June 14, through the Fourth of July, we invite you to join us in showing the Flying Colors of the United States.

To celebrate the 200th Birthday of the United States, Braniff people will be wearing lapel emblems of the Bicentennial flags of 1776-1976. It is one way of saying we're proud to be Americans and proud of the United States. If you would like to have the lapel emblem of the Nation's Flying Colors 1776-1976, we will have one on your luncheon or dinner tray when you fly with us, at every Braniff ticket counter and at many travel agencies. Take as many as you wish.

Another symbol of our pride is the flagship of our jet fleet upon which famed American artist Alexander Calder has painted the red, white and blue of the Nation's flag as it waves. There is only one Bicentennial plane, but all the other Braniff jets carry the words "Flying Colors." Join us—Let's show the Flying Colors of the United States!

Michigan State's Young Medical School Becomes College of the Bedside Manner

By BOYCE REINSBERGER
Special to The New York Times

EAST LANSING, Mich.—Michigan State University's young and innovative medical school, with its headquarters here and students in training all over Michigan, could be called the College of the Bedside Manner.

In a time when people increasingly criticize the impersonality of doctors who know much about their specialties and little about people, M.S.U.'s College of Human Medicine is devoting a major effort to turning out doctors who are not only up-to-date but who combine the warmth of the old-time family doctor with a grasp of the often neglected social and environmental factors in illness.

"The establishment school says medicine is applied biological science," said Dr. Andrew Hunt, dean of the college. "We say medicine is basically a helping profession and applied biological science is merely one tool. We want our graduates to have other tools such as an understanding of human behavior, social factors, ethics, community organization and so forth.

"We feel the medical school should work toward meeting the needs of society," Dr. Hunt went on. "Our objective is to move with the rest of society toward meeting those needs."

Unusual Approach

That is not the sort of talk one hears in most medical schools. But then the M.S.U. medical school, which was established as a two-year school in 1964, expanded to four years in 1970 and granted its first M.D. in 1972, does not do many things the way they are done at most other medical schools.

Its combination of curricular and administrative innovations and its emphasis on turning out doctors who can deal with the broad range of human personalities and feelings as well as the "nonmedical" factors affecting health is becoming a model for other schools.

Nearly a score of new or expanding medical schools have emulated a number of M.S.U.'s programs and, in a few cases, have hired away faculty and administrative personnel instrumental in the innovations.

In the typical medical school the emphasis in the first two years, the "pre-clinical" phase, is on rapidly accumulating lots of scientific facts through formal courses in biochemistry, microbiology, pathology, pharmacology, physiology and anatomy, as one M.S.U. doctor put it, "establishing one long intimate relationship with a cadaver."

It is commonly accepted among doctors that much of the material traditionally taught in the first two years of medical school is not relevant to day-to-day practice and is soon forgotten by many doctors.

Front Lines of Medicine

Whereas most medical students never have contact with a real patient until their third year and then only in a massive, academically oriented university hospital, M.S.U. students interview patients and take medical histories in their first year and they do it in clinics, community hospitals and doctors' offices—the front lines of medicine.

Instead of formal classes proceeding through the basic sciences, about half of M.S.U.'s students opt for an informal system using groups of eight to ten beginning students, an advanced medical student, a behavioral scientist, a biological scientist and a physician preceptor.

Unlike most medical schools, M.S.U. accepts only about half its students from the typical pre-med undergraduate programs. The other half are older men and women with experience in other fields.

In one group of 10, for example, there were five students directly out of college, a woman with a master's degree in social work who had headed a large drug abuse program, a pharmacist with four years experience, a Ph.D. electrical engineer with 12 years in research and teaching, a male nurse who worked in a rural area, a nuclear engineer turned environmental activist, and an ex-Marine.

Last fall's entering class was 38 percent women and about one-quarter were black, Spanish-speaking or Indian.

POWER BARGAIN DUE FOR OFF-HOURS USE

The State Public Service Commission yesterday announced the start of an experiment designed to persuade consumers to wash their clothes or run their vacuum cleaners late at night to save on electricity bills.

The experiment, to be conducted initially with no more than 200 customers of Orange and Rockland Utilities Inc., is an effort to persuade householders to take advantage of so-called "time of day" pricing for electricity.

Under the experiment, electricity consumed on Sundays and between 10 P.M. and 10 A.M. would cost only one-sixth as much as power used at other times.

The 200 Rockland and Orange customers, who have already participated in a company experiment to measure the amount of electricity they consume at different times of the day, will be offered an opportunity to be billed under a novel rate system.

Rates for residential power now run from 8.15 cents to 5.65 cents a kilowatt hour.

Under the new rate structure, users would be charged a flat 2 cents an hour on Sundays and between 10 P.M. and 10 A.M. Rates at other times would be 5.3 cents a kilowatt hour from October through May, and 12.8 cents in the peak air-conditioning months of the summer.

Body Is Found in Bay

A human body wrapped in carpeting and tied with baling wire, to which a six-foot chain with a 10-pound anchor was attached, was found yesterday floating in Jamaica Bay off the North Channel Bridge in Howland Beach, Queens.

MARRIAGES OF REPORT

Anglican Study of Rites and Effects on Children

NEITH A. BRIGGS Roman Catholic Announcement on mixed marriages yesterday by the Anglican study, has proposed that would further requirements for recognition of marriages.
The study, made in a report, would presumably be easier for a non-Anglican to perform marriages and would require that the partner guarantee to bring in his power to raise children in the Church. As an alternative, the report recommends that the priest assure the partner of his obligation.

The study, a commission, was headed by the Catholic prelate John S. C. Bishop Ernestine, and by Bishop George O. of Ireland, considering the theoretical practice of marriage in 1967. Several other commissions of Anglicans and Lutherans and have been at work on problems in relation to mixed marriages. In an effort to resolve the conflict, both have been moving to create a flexible climate for mixed marriages that have increased over the last two years. In 1970, Pope Paul announced historical changes in the Catholic position on mixed marriages in a document titled "Matrimo-nia Mixta." The document softened the promise to raise Catholics and conviction that made for a non-Catholic partner to be officiated under a "dispensation" by the local priest.

The proposal, if adopted, would require the Anglican to "form the marriage legally" in the Catholicism if both Anglican bishops approve.

Communion Idea
The study also examined the obligation to raise Catholics, the study recommended that the priest "not be empowered to make a promise in the name of either partner, but might well ask for the obligations were to be met. The bishop, if satisfied, might grant a dispensation for the marriage on the strength of the study's findings.

The study's policy obliges the priest to "do all in his power to educate children in the Catholic faith."
But in reality, according to Catholic officials, the study's findings
offer widely ranging opportunities for cooperation between Anglicans and Catholics.
The report said
that English speaking Catholics have been least hospitable to Anglicans.
The study's report said that the study's findings aim to enhance Catholic understanding of Anglicans because of confusions between the two bodies.

The report said that the study's policy is demeaning to the dignity of their organization. On the matter the report said that the study's findings
aim to enhance Catholic understanding of Anglicans because of confusions between the two bodies.

INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION ON THE COMMEMORATION OF THE 150th ANNIVERSARY OF THE AMPHICTYONIC CONFERENCE OF PANAMA National Journalists

Who's with Jane?

During the past few weeks Jane Powell has appeared—in newspapers and on television—in various fascinating parts of Dry Dock Country.

Since you were invited to guess her whereabouts, perhaps you would be interested to know just where she was.

First Jane bicycled through 64th Street between Park and Lexington. Then she visited the Martha Graham School of Contemporary Dance. Next came the 2nd Avenue station of the new Roosevelt Island Tramway and then the Children's Zoo in Central Park.

This time Jane is at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. We're telling you, because this time our contest is a little different. And this time there is absolutely no clue in our newspaper ad.

The right answer can be found in our current TV commercial. During the course of that commercial a Mystery

Celebrity makes a cameo appearance with Jane.

If you spot and identify this very important person—a very big name in this town—you could be in for quite an unusual treat.

Come to any office of the Dry Dock Savings Bank before Friday, June 18, and drop the Mystery Celebrity's name—along with your own and your address—into the official contest bowl.

On the morning of the 18th, bonded messengers will transfer all entries to our main office at 59th and Lexington. There at 12:30 pm the first 15 correct answers drawn from the master bowl will win an evening for two in Dry Dock Country—limousine, dinner, nightclub, the works.

We hope you win.

Brooklyn Judge Upholds Indictments Against Steingut and His Son

By MAX H. SEIGEL

A Supreme Court justice in Brooklyn upheld yesterday a two-count felony indictment charging Stanley Steingut, Speaker of the State Assembly, and his son, Robert, a Brooklyn Councilman at Large, with corruptly using their offices to arrange a city job for a Bronx haberdasher in return for a $2,500 contribution to the son's campaign.

Justice Leon Polsky set June 24 as the tentative date for the start of their trial.

Both Steinguts have moved to have the indictments, obtained by the Brooklyn District Attorney, Eugene Gold, dismissed on the grounds that there had been insufficient evidence that women had been discriminated against in the selection of the grand jury and that Section 448 of the state's election law, under which they were indicted, was unconstitutional.

According to the indictment, announced last Nov. 6, the Assembly Speaker, second only to Governor Carey as the most powerful Democrat in the state, and his son, offered an honorarium, nonpaying city post to Hans Rubenfeld if he would contribute the $2,500 to the younger Steingut's campaign for election to the City Council.

'Adviser' Job Sought

The job Mr. Rubenfeld wanted was that of unsalaried "adviser" to the Civilian Complaint Review Board, or later, honorarily deputy police commissioner.

He allegedly made the campaign contribution by turning over the money in $100 bills at two meetings. But he did not get the job, and this apparently resulted in a complaint to the Brooklyn District Attorney.

In his opinion, Justice Polsky said there was doubt whether the defendants had offered "to assist in obtaining for Rubenfeld any office or public employment... all Rubenfeld wanted was an honorary position." But as a matter of law, he added, this fit the descriptions in Section 448 of the election law.

Justice Polsky rejected the contention of the defendants that the statute under which they were charged was unconstitutional because it did not specify the conduct it banned.

"The particular words and phrases singled out by counsel," he said, "are, of course, subject to debate as to shades of meaning. However, in context, the overall thrust and prohibition in the statute is sufficiently clear to alert a prospective violator to the kind of conduct which is prohibited."

The judge also rejected the argument that women had been discriminated against in the selection of the grand jury, saying that 10 of its 23 members had been women.

And he upheld the jurisdiction of a Brooklyn court, although none of the alleged acts took place in Brooklyn. The grand jury, he said, had reason to believe that the unlawful acquisition of funds for a Kings County election could have a materially harmful impact on the welfare of the county.

Justice Polsky also upheld yesterday four counts of a five-count indictment charging former Judge Ludwig G. Glowa of Criminal Court with accepting a $500 bribe not to jail two men convicted on narcotics charges.

The indictment, handed up by a special grand jury as a result of an investigation by the anti-corruption prosecutor, Maurice H. Nadjar, accused Judge Glowa of granting the two men a conditional discharge after he received the money.

Judge Glowa, who had been chief administrative judge of Brooklyn Criminal Courts, was relieved of his judicial duties after the bribery indictment was announced on Jan. 27. The one count not upheld involved official misconduct in knowingly refraining from imposing an appropriate sentence.

Raul Castro Visits Congo For Talks With President

HAVANA, June 7 (Reuters)—Defense Minister Raul Castro of Cuba paid a visit to Brazzaville, capital of Congo, last week for talks with President Marien Ngouabi, the official Cuban daily Granma reported here today.

The talks, with President Ngouabi and with Defense and Security Minister Denis Sassou Nguesso during the visit June 5 and 4, covered the international situation and bilateral relations, the newspaper said.

Both parties agreed that "the extraordinary victory of the brotherly Angolan people had a great historical meaning for the world in general and the African continent in particular." Granma said, apparently quoting a joint communique.

'Disappointed' via Portrayal in Ohio Primary

NORDEHIMER
RECK, Calif., June 7—Representative Morris K. Udall of Arizona is said to be wondering whether he is running in the Ohio primary against the concerted force of a Carter-Church ticket. Udall Is Said to View Ohio Primary As a Sign of Carter-Church Ticket

By CHRISTOPHER LYON
Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, June 7—Representative Morris K. Udall of Arizona is said to be wondering whether he is running in the Ohio primary against the concerted force of a Carter-Church ticket. It was Campaign Senator Frank Church of Idaho, a latecomer to the Democratic primary campaign, who urged Mr. Udall to drop out of the race after Mr. Udall failed to win the South Dakota primary last week.

Udall Ohio Commercials Are Found to Help Rival

By JOSEPH LELYVELD
Special to The New York Times
AKRON, Ohio, June 7—The fourth advertising spot in the third break for commercials on the Saturday night movie featured Representative Morris K. Udall in shirt-sleeves. Norman Georges, a worker at a Goodyear tire factory that has been closed by a strike since mid-April, understood the Arizona Democrat to be saying in the commercial that he had been right in opposing the Vietnam war, and that Jimmy Carter had been wrong.

There's no sense in rehashing the past like that," Mr. Georges said with irritation. "The present is too damn important."

A similar effort is under way for Mr. Reagan in Ohio, sponsored by the American Conservative Union. But the big spending in Ohio has been on the Democratic side, with Mr. Carter far outdistancing his rivals with an outlay of $300,000 for advertising of all kinds, his largest in any of the 30 primary states in which he has run.

By RICHARD D. LYONS
Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, June 7—Democratic representatives took two procedural steps today to try to clean up administrative disarray and hunt election-year criticism of their behavior. Representative John J. Flynn, chairman of the Ethics Committee, introduced a resolution asking the House for a blank check for funds to conduct its increasing number of investigations without allowing the House Administration Committee, headed by Representative Wayne L. Hays, to have veto power over the money.

More for Chairman
Committee chairmen have much larger funds at their disposal. Most House committees have $1 million at their disposal each year for routine expenses and the hiring of staff. Mr. Hays, as chairman of the committee having oversight over these funds, has even greater leverage on House affairs. His Administration Committee controls the patronage of 5,000 people on the House payroll, such as lawyers, clerks, policemen and cooks.

$100,000 to Be Given To Women Candidates
WASHINGTON, June 7 (UPI)—A women's fund-raising group announced today that it expected to contribute $100,000 to female candidates this year to try to break up "a virtually exclusive men's club" in the Senate.

Miss Ray has said, and Mr. Hays has denied, that she did virtually no work while on the committee staff, although she was paid $14,000 a year. She said that her main function was to serve as Mr. Hays's mistress. Mr. Hays, an Ohio Democrat who is running tomorrow for nomination in his state's primary, has conceded that he had a sexual relationship with Miss Ray.

Both the Justice Department and the ethics committee have begun investigations into charges that Mr. Hays had, in effect, padded his payroll by hiring Miss Ray and thus violated Federal law.

Vilella Quits 'Pal Joey' Over 'Differences'

Edward Vilella resigned yesterday from the cast of "Pal Joey," the Rodgers and Hart musical in which he was to have attempted his first major Broadway role...

Edward Vilella "Artistic differences"

Paul Libbin, managing director of Circle in the Square, where "Pal Joey" was to have opened June 17, also said that Mr. Vilella had left because of "artistic differences."

Mann called him again in March he told Mr. Mann that But Mr. Mann persisted, and Mr. Vilella allowed himself to be convinced. Rehearsals began in April.

Within weeks, Mr. Vilella was saying that he found his rehearsal schedule "totally chaotic." He was complaining that he was being directed one way in the morning and another way in the afternoon...

Mr. Vilella said later, "but I couldn't sing." Nonetheless, Mr. Vilella considered it, and he signed into a tape recorder and then listening to himself. He still did not think he could sing, and when Mr.

place—then performing the repertory at night. I'm used to working with choreographers like Jerry Robbins and George Balanchine. They're like my family. They know me inside and out."

Toward the end of last month, with the company on a 16-hour-a-day schedule, Mr. Vilella said he was "freaking out." He went to Mr. Mann and said he would quit unless he got more help with his part. As was almost inevitable, he wanted the help from Mr. Robbins and Mr. Balanchine.

Mr. Mann asked Mr. Vilella to wait before he turned outside the company. "I need help now," Mr. Vilella said, but Mr. Mann persuaded him to wait. Mr. Vilella went through three more run-throughs of the show, and then went back to Mr. Mann. Unless he was allowed to bring in Mr. Balanchine and Mr. Robbins immediately, he said, he would resign. Mr. Mann relented.

Mr. Vilella called the choreographers. "I think I'm going to fall on my face," he said. You've got to help me." Both Mr. Balanchine and Mr. Robbins said that they would attend the next run-through, and that they would do all they could to help. Mr. Vilella, moved, burst into tears.

After seeing the run-through, Mr. Robbins said he would "make a few suggestions." He also said that he wanted Vilella to be kept a secret, and that he would do it "just as a favor to Eddie." In the small worlds of Broadway and ballet, however, there are few secrets: Word about Mr. Robbins's part soon got out, just as word about Mr. Balanchine's part got out. Mr. Balanchine agreed to re-choreograph Mr. Vilella's solos.

In particular, Mr. Balanchine worked on Mr. Vilella's closing ballet number at the end of Act One and his solo in "You Mustn't Kick It Around." The production numbers by Margo Sappington, who received a Tony nomination for Circle in the Square's 1974 revival of "Where's Charley?" were left intact.

From May 24 to May 28, rehearsals of "Pal Joey" were closed to visitors, while Mr. Robbins started to re-stage Mr. Vilella's songs, as well as his lead-ins. Mr. Robbins also worked with Mr. Mann. Frequently appearing with him backstage, he also had individual conferences with the members of the cast.

On May 28, the first paid preview of "Pal Joey" was canceled for what the show's management called "technical difficulties." A second preview was canceled for the same reason. Word got out that "Pal Joey" was in trouble.

Previews of the show, are now supposed to continue with Christopher Chadman, Mr. Vilella's understudy, in the title role. Eleanor Parker, who was Mr. Vilella's co-star, is supposed to remain with the show, although the official critics' opening of June 17 will be delayed.

Helen Hayes Honored by Boston Repertory

By JOHN KIFNER Special to The New York Times BOSTON, June 7—When Helen Hayes walked onto the stage of the Shubert Theater here last night, it was as if someone had turned up a rheostat.

Suddenly the show, the theater, even the drizzly night seemed brighter as the white-haired woman carrying the bundle of roses threw back her head in throaty laughter. Even though the show was in her honor, Miss Hayes stole it simply by appearing to say thank you.

The 76-year-old actress made one of her now increasingly rare appearances on a stage here at a tribute with a difference: Its purpose was to provide a boost to a struggling local repertory theater company.

The Massachusetts Center Repertory Company, which plans to offer a 28-week subscription season, hopes to re-establish a resident professional theater group operating full-time in Boston.

Miss Hayes' appearance was in keeping with her long-time interest both in aiding young actors and actresses and establishing repertory theater. She herself has played with the A.P.A. Phoenix Company and has sponsored a troupe to give Shakespearean performances before college audiences.

Speakers during the evening bemoaned Boston's lack of a resident theater company of the sort doing so well in New Haven and Minneapolis, particularly in light of what they described as this city's reputation for cultural excellence.

Several repertory theater groups have begun and failed here. Among the problems are the relative nearness of New York City. Locally, theater goes the try-out performances of Broadway-bound shows and college productions in several in-city theaters.

But the strongest pieces of theater—and the most moving parts of the evening—were films of Miss Hayes' two of her strongest performances, in "Victoria Regina" and "Mary of Scotland."

Helen Hayes on the stage of the Shubert Theater in Boston Sunday night. Keeping up her long tradition of aiding young actors and actresses

As the show opened, Miss Hayes, under heavy makeup, held the audience rapt as she portrayed the aging Victoria in the full production she begins as a teen-ager—returning from a revue, conveying pride, humor, regal power and the vulnerability of an old woman without her beloved husband with just the flickering shifts of her eyes and voice.

The master of ceremonies was Jess Cain, a local disk jockey, and much of the evening consisted of songs and dances from various periods of Miss Hayes' life. It began with a surprise performance by the Boston Pops conductor Arthur Fiedler, leading the "Washington Post March," recalling that Miss Hayes as a young girl in Washington heard John Philip Sousa perform. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, which is touring here, performed several rousing Gilbert and Sullivan numbers, although its connection with Miss Hayes was somewhat tenuous.

A company playing in a revue in New York did a series of Harold Arlen songs, including "Stormy Weather" and numbers from "The Wizard of Oz."

Local reviewers, while properly in awe of Miss Hayes, were less enthusiastic about the production. Mr. Kelly said it was "interesting and occasionally moving," although he thought that the musical interludes were "all treasuring water."

Moynihan Honor Splits Campus

It's Daniel Patrick Moynihan controversy time again. The usually blunt-spoken former United States representative to the United Nations is a center of dispute on the Ohio State University campus in Columbus because of an honorary Doctor of Laws degree he is supposed to receive on Friday.

Two members of the university's nine-person board of trustees voted against giving Mr. Moynihan the degree, and so Mr. Moynihan is less than enthusiastic about accepting it, although he plans to.

One dissenting vote was cast by Patricia D. James, the only black trustee, who contended that Mr. Moynihan had shown signs he was "a racist." The reason for the other dissenter's vote has not been disclosed.

Mr. Moynihan denied the charge of racism and brushed aside allegations by some Ohio State student groups that he is "a sexist" and "a chauvinist."

Of the divided vote on the degree, Mr. Moynihan commented: "That's like wishing you a speedy recovery and voting 7 to 2 on it. It's not like I need an honorary degree. I have 25."

Sitting as guest of honor at a luncheon given here by the Conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations yesterday, Joseph J. Sisco, who is leaving his post as Under Secretary of State for Political Affairs, heard himself praised in messages from President Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. Mr. Ford referred to Mr. Sisco's "brilliant career in the United States Government" and "a long and distinguished record of dedication to the cause of international peace."

The bans of marriage were read in the royal palace chapel in Stockholm yesterday for the wedding of King Carl XVI Gustaf and Silvia Sommerlath, a German commoner, on June 19. The engagement has been previously announced, but for church weddings in Sweden, which has a Lutheran state church, the bans, or official notice, must be read by a clergyman. The bride-to-be, who has been ill with the flu, barely got to the chapel on time for the ceremony.

Ethel Kennedy and 10 of her 11 children visited her husband's grave in Arlington National Cemetery Sunday, on the eighth anniversary of Senator Robert F. Kennedy's death. Mrs. Kennedy's youngest daughter, Rory, 7, who was born after her father's assassination, placed a bouquet of yellow roses on the grave.

Herbert Hoover is running for political office. The namesake and distant relative of the 31st President, carrying on a political family tradition, is a Republican seeking to win the senate seat now held by William Proxmire, Democrat of Wisconsin.

Caril Fugate, Charles Starkweather's then 14-year-old companion on a murder rampage that left 10 persons dead in 1958, will be considered for a parole today, after spending more than half her life in a Nebraska prison. Miss Fugate, now 32 years old, will be eligible for release on parole June 20, and she is already in a work-release program that allows her to spend Sundays as a geriatric aide. She was convicted on a first-degree murder charge. Mr. Starkweather was executed.

While their husbands attended a conference on energy in Chatham, Mass., the wives of New England governors visited Rose Kennedy and Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis at the Kennedy family compound in Hyannis Port. Thomas Grasso, husband of

Gov. Ella Grasso of Connecticut, went along, too, and said afterward, "It's better than visiting dress shops."

A Primary Election Day lesson in good citizenship: Bess Brown, 105 year olds, of Vista, Calif., who has not missed a Presidential election vote since 1920, when women were given the national franchise, said today's election would be no exception. She will go to the polls with her two sisters, Zella Simpson, 92, and Edith Smith, 95, who also claim perfect voting records. "If a woman doesn't vote, she doesn't have a right to complain about anything," Mrs. Brown said.

In Johannesburg, Joseph Segars, the first American black assigned as a consul in South Africa, took up his duties yesterday. Mr. Segars, whose former post was on the West African affairs desk in the State Department will deal with passport matters, visas and the protection of American citizens' rights in South Africa, which has a race segregation policy.

Secretary General Kurt Waldheim of the United Nations and several ambassadors to the United Nations were out in Nashville yesterday, receiving a musical salute from stars of the Grand Ole Opry. The visit by Mr. Waldheim and his colleagues was the first of a series of similar trips United Nations representatives will be making to various parts of the country as part of the Bicentennial celebration. The Waldheim group was welcomed by Gov. Ray Blanton of Tennessee, and at a forum on the campus of Vanderbilt Mr. Waldheim was presented the Cordell Hull Peace Award, named for the late Tennesseean who, as Franklin D. Roosevelt's Secretary of State, helped create the United Nations and won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1945.

UNDERUSE OF DRUGS BY AGED REPORTED

WASHINGTON, June 7 (UPI)—Underuse of drugs may be a greater problem among the elderly than overuse. Government drug abuse officials told a joint session of Senate subcommittees on aging, alcoholism and narcotics today. Some witnesses expressed concern about the overprescribing of tranquilizers, sedatives and hypnotic drugs to create "chemical straitjackets" among nursing home patients.

GOLDIN FINDS CITY A DAY-CARE VICTIM

gage of $1,034,000, or $78,000 more than the landlord's investment in construction and other expenses.

The rent the city is obligated to pay—$147,750 a year for 20 years—is calculated to be $30,000 a year more than the landlord's debt service and other costs. The result, the report says, is a $800,000 profit for the entire term, aside from "favorable impact of depreciation under existing income-tax laws."

Prosecutor Investigating
The city currently pays rent of more than $433,000 a year for six centers not being used, two of which were never opened, the report says.

In addition 10 direct-lease centers are among 49 centers slated to lose city operating funds on July 1 as a result of the budget crisis. But the city will still have to pay rents of $1 million a year on those 10.

Another investigation is being pursued by District Attorney Robert M. Morgenthau of Manhattan, and a mayoral task force has started an overhaul of the Agency for Child Development.

In commenting on the Real Estate Department, the Goldin report says that despite repeated criticisms since 1972, the department has "continued to negotiate leases without sufficient basis for determining their reasonableness."

Initially, the report says, the department fixed rents at $3 to $3.75 a square foot when the direct-lease program began in 1968. This price was said to have been arrived at after extensive talks with real-estate and construction representatives, but the report says there is "no documentation to support" that contention.

The initial rents and other aspects of the program were criticized by the City Department of Investigation in 1971 and the City and State Comptrollers in 1972. Since then, the new report says, rents on newer centers have been increasing toward $5.50 a square foot. This has been attributed to increased construction costs and the inclusion of air-conditioning.

Missing Data Reported

The report says the Real Estate Department reported a new procedure that requires developers to submit estimated costs. But when Comptroller Goldin's office asked for 37 folders for leases since 1972, it received only 11—and the rest were reported missing.

In 10 of the 11 cases, the report says, the Real Estate Department's own architects estimated costs were well below landlord estimates—for instance, $226,247 less than a landlord estimate of $1,526,247 for one project.

"In not one case," the report says, "could we find records detailing how the differences were resolved or what was discussed in any negotiating session with a landlord."

The city's own estimates, the report says, were "largely derived from the developers, and no effort was made to determine actual costs."

The report points out that the Real Estate Commissioner, Ira Duchan, contended that landlords would not agree to lower rents if costs turned out to be below estimates. In addition, the Commissioner is said to have asserted that banks would not grant mortgages if leases contained cancellation clauses. But the report says that he had no records to support these views.

Poor Supervision Charged

"Supervision of construction was inadequate," the Comptroller's report says. It notes that at the Livonia Avenue center one-third of the space has not been used because of flooding in a basement that started on Aug. 9, 1974, the day the owner obtained a certificate of occupancy.

The direct-lease program "may be one of the largest giveaway programs in the city history," the report says. It urges that the city halt all new leases "until adequate controls are established," seek to terminate leases no longer needed or find other suitable uses or subleases for space.

The report criticizes the Agency for Child Development for "poor planning," with no determination of need or usage.

The Comptroller recommends that the city establish criteria for selecting sites, use space in schools if it is available and advertise for any needed commercial space "to establish competition and reduce costs." Future leases, the report says, should provide for much shorter terms, such as five years with renewal options, and provide for termination clauses.

But the United Nations Plaza Hotel, on the other hand, is excellent—on a modest scale in New York it manages exactly what the designers of the much-publicized new Ritz Carlton in Chicago have been suggesting was impossible, namely the creation of a serious luxury hotel of entirely modern design.

For men and their sons he found jobs—either part time or full time. He referred a woman and her mother to a lawyer at the club for free help in a landlord dispute. He promised to help a civilian in the Police Department to get work on a midnight shift so he could be with an ailing father during the day.

George A. McCracken conducting the regular Thursday "confessional" night at the Democratic association that bears his name. Here he refers two constituents to a lawyer at the club for free help in a landlord dispute.

Ground Is Broken For Unit to Service Trains to Buffalo
Amtrak, the national rail passenger system, broke ground yesterday at Rensselaer, N.Y., for a $14.8 million maintenance facility for the new high-speed turbine-powered trains to go into service this year on the New York-Albany-Buffalo run.

CORRECTION
A picture caption on a financial page in The New York Times yesterday incorrectly identified a woman at the right as Ingrid Palmer of the Bureau International du Travail in Switzerland. She is, in fact, Hannah Papanek, associate professor of sociology at Boston University.

NEW YORK: Above, workmen at the John and William Streets in downtown yesterday. The city Traffic Department between John and William would be to repair the damage, caused by a steam leak. Below: an abandoned car at the corner of 43d Street and Seventh Avenue, Times Square, where it remained all day long although it was in a tow-away zone, blocking a crosswalk and a traffic lane. The car bore New Jersey plates issued to another car.

Sheriff Accused of Selling Seized Guns

Special to The New York Times
N.Y., June 7—A State Commission investigation of the Dutchess County Sheriff's Office has accused the sheriff of selling seized guns to members of the Dutchess County Sheriff's Office and that the Sheriff had interfered in arrests of motorists charged with driving while intoxicated.

Found at Tank-Blast Site

Robert Cresch Nicholas, the 16-year-old missing since the explosion last Thursday of two million-gallon storage tanks 1, was found yesterday buried in sand 6-foot pier adjacent to the original site. A spokesman for the Nassau County said the body had been found by 3:30 P.M.

1,000 in Linden, N.J.

Voters assembly plant in Linden, N. J., closed yesterday and hired another 1,000 workers yesterday because the company had a production schedule. It was on Jan. 4, 1974, scuffed workers on the second shift at 4 p.m. because of the energy crisis and p in car sales. Yesterday the parking was jammed, the first time they have 1974.

Charges False Arrest

Civil suit charging false arrest, filed by a basketball player, is scheduled to open court in Newark. The defendants are a Penn Central conductor and five policemen. Brian Taylor, a Nets guard, said he had been arrested after having been told to take his train. He was removed from the train on March 14, 1972.

Police Blotter:

Identified woman 18 to 20 years old was found on the grass near Swan Lake in Prospect Park and a printed blouse. The woman is unknown, pending an autopsy.

Helping New York Volunteers Bolstering Probation Department

By BARBARA CAMPBELL
Blanche Leventhal stands in the doorway of the waiting room at Manhattan Family Court surveying the faces of the waiting parents. She is trying to decide which one to approach.

To Learn More

If you would like to volunteer to help the Department of Probation, call Eve Servin, 566-6454.

Department. If there is anything you'd like to know about Family Court, I'd be glad to help you.

The woman stares straight ahead.

Mrs. Leventhal tries again: "You know, it's a long wait around here. You never know when you're going to be called into the probation officer's office."

The woman moves her head slightly to glance at her watch. Mrs. Leventhal leans forward slightly herself. Maybe she's making progress.

"And when you do get to see them, they won't do nothing to those boys," the woman says, speaking to the space in front of her.

"Oh? You're here because some boys did something to your son?" asks Mrs. Leventhal, pressing her slight advantage.

"Yeah," says the woman, still staring ahead. "Two boys took him at knife point in a basement."

Procedures Explained

Mrs. Leventhal sits down next to the woman. "Well, let me tell you what's going to happen. The boys will see a probation officer, their school records will be checked, Probation will find out whether they've been in trouble before and then some decision will be made."

The woman sighs and for the first time she looks at Mrs. Leventhal. "I just wonder whether it's just a waste of time," she said. "I took a day off work to come here."

"No, let me tell you one thing," Mrs. Leventhal says. "You are the complainant and as a citizen you have the right to take this to court if you want."

The woman is a little convinced. She seems to feel a little better.

Mrs. Leventhal, after a few more assuring words, moves on searching the room for another family to help.

"Sweetheart, I appreciate your effort but I'm too upset to talk," says one woman, who is there, she says, to have her truant daughter picked up by the police and put in an institution. "I'd rather see her there than on the streets," says the woman, bitterly. Mrs. Leventhal pats her shoulder and moves on.

Two boys edge over to Mrs. Leventhal. They have been listening to her talk to another parent. "We want to know, one says in a hushed voice, "whether you can go to jail for breaking in parking meters."

"I don't know, I'm not a lawyer," says Mrs. Leventhal. "What are you breaking in meters for anyway, I'd like to know?" They smile sheepishly.

"Because it was there," one of them says. Mrs. Leventhal is a little lost for words.

More Volunteers Needed

Eve Servin, volunteer coordinator for the New York City Department of Probation, says the department needs more volunteers like Mrs. Leventhal, who along with the nine other volunteers at New York Family Court are with the New York Section of the National Council on Jewish Women.

The organization made a three-year study of the Juvenile Justice System and published a book called "Children Without Justice," and some of their members across the country volunteer to help in the Family Courts.

A similar program will begin in Queens Family Court in July, and volunteers are needed for the juvenile in-take waiting room there. Training for the program begins the last two weeks in June.

The Department of Probation, like all other agencies, is short-staffed because of fiscal cuts, Mrs. Servin said, and volunteers are needed in many different departments. "We need aides to assist probation officers," she says. "And in Queens Family Court we are also setting up a reading clinic and we need volunteers for that."

Volunteers, Mrs. Servin said, must like people and have patience and be mature. Like Mrs. Leventhal. People with criminal records, she said, are not excluded.

Tall Man's Woes Heighten Off Court

make things on a bigger scale.

as a child because of crude remarks by other children, but now he says: "Ever since then I realized how blessed I was. It's a gift to be tall. I can always be seen. And don't look up to too many people—just Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Tom Burleson. Personally, I think a tall person looks nice." Kareem of the Lakers and Burleson of the Sonics are 7-2.

But being seven is not always a blessing. "In Cleveland, I can't do anything without immediate recognition," notes Witte. "It's really hard to have a personal life. You don't know how nice it is to have a few drinks, listen to the band and talk to your girl friend without someone coming over to you. I long for evenings like that."

Wherever the centers go, they know that people are talking about them behind their backs or turning round to stare at them.

When Witte goes out with a woman who is over 6 feet, she finds he gets twice as many stares. He is so self-conscious about this height that he stopped measuring himself more than nine years ago, as a sophomore in high school. "I got close enough to 7 feet to stop," he says. "I decided I would quit growing right then. And even if I didn't, I did."

There is the constant question: "How tall are you?" Once Boerwinkle felt a tug on his jacket and looked down to see a little girl standing there. In the lowest voice she asked, "Baby, how many feet is you?"

Occasionally, a player gets a little revenge. A man in an elevator once asked a 7-footer the question most hated by tall men, "How's the weather up there?" The player reportedly poured his Coke all over the man's head, and said, "It's raining."

A.B.A. Agrees on Plan For 4 Merger Teams

It would take 14 affirmative votes from the 18 N.B.A. owners to approve the accommodation.

However, there is still the possibility that the N.B.A. may reject the offer, or that the A.B.A. may function as a separate league next season.

Basically, we still have our league, Brown said. "We still have our teams until the N.B.A. approves it [the merger] or disapproves it. I don't think you can assume anything with the N.B.A."

One thing that cannot be assumed is that approval by the N.B.A. owners will guarantee a merger. "There are a number of issues—some of sticky issues—that will have to be settled before any one league emerges from these complicated dealings."

Foremost will be the settlement of the probable lawsuit that the A.B.A. Players Association would file if the teams attempt to enter the N.B.A. Prentiss Yancey, the attorney for the A.B.A. players, said that such a lawsuit would be filed in the event of any other accommodation that allowed fewer than the full complement of A.B.A. teams to enter the N.B.A.

The other obvious stumbling block is the distribution of players from the Colonels and Spirits. Obviously, some players from the Colonels and the Spirits—whose franchise was shifted to Utah recently—would be welcome by surviving A.B.A. teams, as well as the N.B.A. team that held their draft rights. For example, where would players such as Artis Gilmore, Marvin Barnes, Moses Malone and Maurice Lucas end up?

Gilmore's and Lucas's draft rights are owned in the N.B.A. by Chicago; Barnes's by Philadelphia; Malone's by New Orleans. How their placement would be determined would have to be acceptable to the N.B.A. The four entering teams would presumably come in with their rosters intact.

There is also the less complicated question of how much the Nets would have to pay the Knicks any indemnity for entering the metropolitan area territory with a team in the same league.

Do you have (tight money) neurosis?

The past few years have made many investors nervous about tight money. They're reading the Fed's more restrictive short-term policy as a possible cause of market correction, the harbinger of double-digit interest rates, the saboteur of economic recovery and other unrealized problems.

Today's interest conditions bear little resemblance to those of other, less orderly times. It is extremely important for investors to appreciate the differences. To help, Kidder, Peabody has devoted its latest Investment Strategy Report significantly to the subject.

The report also isolates a unique investment situation in a special automotive sector. Overlooked by conventional sources, it has particular meaning in current economic circumstances. We suggest you send for your copy today. Just mail the coupon.

Simplicity Pattern's 'Surprise'

By VARTANIG G. VARTAN

The axiom that wall Street takes unkindly to adverse surprises, particularly on the earnings front, has been borne out anew in the case of Simplicity Pattern, the leading maker of paper patterns for women's and children's clothing.

Last Friday, on a heavy volume on 113,000 shares, Simplicity's stock slumped to a yearly low and closed at 12 1/4, down 1 3/4 points for the day.

Yesterday, the stock touched a new 1976 low at 11 1/4 before closing at 12, off 1/4, on a turnover of 63,700 shares.

That compares with this year's high of 23 1/4 and with the record high of 58 1/2 in 1973, when the stock was a popular growth issue and known as an institutional favorite.

Bache Halsey Stuart put a "sell" recommendation on the stock last Friday and sent a terse commentary over its private wire system to 150 brokerage offices.

What prompted the firm's comment was the announcement by James J. Shapiro, Simplicity's board chairman and chief executive officer, that "we see this year as flat. Unit sales are down." Profits for the latest fiscal year, which ended Jan. 31, came to $1.08 a share.

"That announcement," said Robert Smith, the Bache Halsey Stuart analyst, "ought to be a surprise, since we had spoken to Simplicity's president a short while ago and came away with the distinct impression that our $1.25 estimate for the current year was still in the ball park."

"In our opinion, this turn of events has created a credibility gap in our mind, and we believe it is advisable to withdraw from the issue at this time."

In a telephone interview yesterday, Simplicity's president, Harold Cooper, clarified his remarks to the Bache Halsey Stuart analyst. "I just said that's what some analysts were expecting," he said on the $1.25-a-share projection. "It was too early for me to hazard a guess on this year's earnings."

Mr. Cooper, who is 52 years old, has been named vice chairman. Mr. Shapiro, who now plans to retire at the end of this year at 67, has indicated that Mr. Cooper will become chairman when he steps down.

Bache Halsey Stuart had recommended Simplicity some time ago as a "buy" at 12, and later, when the stock rose to 23, it suggested that investors take profits on a market-timing basis.

One of the factors sending the price of Simplicity higher in active trading during the early part of 1976 was the feeling in some quarters that the company might be a buy-out candidate.

The sharp price rise in early 1976 also went to the benefit of traders who bought options in Simplicity's stock. For example, the Aug. 15 option climbed from 2 1/16 in mid-January to 9 before the end of February.

At another brokerage house, an analyst noted yesterday that "the thing that was surprising was the decline in unit sales of patterns for Simplicity for the first four months of this year."

A third analyst who follows the company pointed to "the absence of any major favorable style trend—such as a marked shift to dresses and skirts by women—so far this year for both Simplicity and the pattern industry generally."

With a "dress-up" trend slow in coming, this analyst added customers could use last year's jeans or pantsuit patterns in their home sewing.

In its annual report for the year ended Jan. 31, 1976, the company mentioned this problem by stating:

"While current fashion trends are somewhat more favorable, they do not, as yet, indicate a fashion picture of sufficient dramatic interest to stimulate a marked increase in the desire for clothing."

In February 1974, Simplicity's stock tumbled 37.5 percent—from 32 to 20—in a single trading day. At that time, factors depressing the stock in the minds of money managers were the combination of rising fabric prices and the trend to casual clothing, along with the decline in consumer disposable income.

From its 1973 high, Simplicity's shares took a nose-dive to 6 1/4 in late 1974 before steadying. Meanwhile, the company raised its quarterly dividend—payable June 18—to 1 1/4 cents a share from 10 cents. This means that the stock now yields in excess of 4 percent annually on a cash dividend basis. Furthermore, Simplicity enjoys a large cash position and has no debt outstanding.

The Justice Department's Antitrust division asked the court to declare Du Pont guilty of illegal suppression of price competition among Lucite retailers and to issue an injunction against the use of the pricing requirements of the cooperative advertising plan in the future.

The suit charged Du Pont and the retailers, at least from 1970 to September, 1974, had entered into what was, in effect, a conspiracy in restraint of trade. The suit said the participating retailers and various individuals, partnerships, corporations and other legal entities participated as "co-conspirators" but were not named as defendants.

Another characteristic unusual to Getty Oil—the lack of an acquisition program. Getty made its last acquisition in 1953 when it took over the Tidewater Oil Company's Flying A properties and its rapid expansion since then has come entirely from within.

hired by the naval shipyard in Norfolk, Va. He also charged that the company was trying to charge the Government twice for the cost of meeting environmental and occupational safety standards, first by including the cost in its overhead and then by making specific claims against the Navy.

Using "national emergency" provisions of a 1958 law, the Defense Department is proposing to settle $1.3 billion in claims brought by three major shipbuilders for approximately $750 million by rewriting their contracts to give them additional cost escalation. The details of the settlement, subject to Congressional veto, are scheduled to be presented to the House Armed Services Committee on Friday by the Deputy Defense Secretary, William F. Clements Jr.

In addition to Newport News Shipbuilding, the claims have been lodged by the Ingalls Shipyard in Pascagoula, Miss., a subsidiary of Litton Industries, Inc., and by the Electric Boat division of the General Dynamics Corporation.

Admiral Rickover placed the blame for the claims problem, which Mr. Clements, a former Texas Businessman, has warned has reached "crisis" proportions, on the fact that the major shipyards in recent years have been taken over by conglomerates.

The conglomerates wouldn't care if they were making ships or horse cars," he observed. "All they are interested in doing is making money." For that reason, he said, the claims had "often been inflated sufficiently to produce the profit desired by the shipbuilder, even though the claim is finally settled for but a portion of the claimed amount."

Steel Output Shows Setback

Weekly steel production for the latest week showed its first setback since the week ended April 3, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported yesterday. The trade association placed output for the most recent week at 2,677 million tons, a drop of 3.2 percent from the previous week when 2,776 million tons were poured. However, the 1976 week included the Memorial Day holiday.

Despite the weekly setback, cumulative production almost crossed 1975 levels. Total output through June 5 reached 56.2 tons, down only 0.9 percent from the 56.77 million tons poured in the 1975 period.

CHAPTER XI SOUGHT BY EASTERN FREIGHT

Eastern Freight Ways, which on April 28, consented to be adjudicated a bankrupt, yesterday filed a petition for reorganization under Chapter XI of the Federal Bankruptcy Act in Federal Court for the Southern District of New York.

Similar action was taken by trucking concern on April 22, but at that time the company was unable to obtain the financing necessary for it to continue its reorganization proceedings. Ronald S. Itzler, a member of the law firm of Ballou, Still & Itzler, special counsel to the company, said yesterday that negotiations by Myron Shevell, president of Eastern Freight Ways, and the company's banks, led to a financing arrangement that paved the way for yesterday's filing. The matter was referred to Federal Judge Roy Babbitt, a hearing has been scheduled for June 21.

Report From Number One Wall Street

John Valentino, Vice President Securities Industry Department

He's bullish on brokers. John Valentino is optimistic about the securities industry. He knows it has a future. Exciting. Changing. And always vital.

That's why, since 1970, his Securities Industry Department has been steadily expanding its commitment and services to brokers, in New York City and around the country.

"Our money management forums bring operating people together to discuss ideas, problems and financing needs. And our bank officers visit regional firms regularly to maintain an industry-wide perspective," says John.

The bank offers an array of services responsive to the needs of brokers in a changing environment. The result has been a dramatic increase in the Irving's share of the market.

Customers tell us our securities collection service is the best on the 'Street' and we believe them," says John. "For we know our personal handling of securities drafts is unique, giving us an average collection time on out-of-town items of less than two business days."

Edward K. Lantz, Vice President International Corporate Services Department

International trade know-how. When a man has counseled the major auto companies on export and import trade practices, you know he understands international trade.

Such a man is Ed Lantz, who is an advisor to the export credit and marketing groups of the Motor Equipment Manufacturers Association. He knows the value of experience. And in his own International Corporate Services Department, he considers the expertise of his people the most vital ingredient in solving complex international trade problems for the bank's customers.

"We look at a company's total foreign trade business and develop a specific financing plan integrating a variety of services," says Lantz. "For instance, we might speed cash flows through our collection services, provide credit through a combination of financing techniques, or recommend hedging procedures to cover foreign exchange risks."

"When you know the customer's business and are able to respond immediately to tough questions about 'red clause' credits, non-recourse and pre-export financing, you get a reputation for being unique in the export/import world."

Walter G. Sall, Vice President Trust Investment Division

Options worth considering. Today, option writing is one of the newest and most interesting investment management techniques available," says Walter Sall, the Irving's expert on the subject.

"Our studies show that a regular program of selling call options against long stock positions both adds to performance and reduces the price volatility of a portfolio."

The Irving began an experimental option writing program for its own pension fund soon after the Chicago Board Options Exchange opened in 1973. And it was the first major New York bank to use the nation's new central marketplace for stock option securities.

Now, the Irving offers its unique experience in option writing as a portfolio management service to a variety of institutional customers... employee benefit funds, endowments and foundations.

As a pioneer in offering covered call option writing to institutional customers, the Irving and its program has already gained substantial recognition in the financial community.

"In our experience," Sall says, "option writing proves to be a conservative technique that offers greater returns, more flexibility, and more liquidity... all at reduced risks."

Grow with us in New England!

We're an established, diversified organization engaged in a wide range of both government and industrial markets, such as: Encodes and Digital Read Out Systems; Micrographics; Computer Information and Engineering Data Systems; and Analytical Design.

Our main offices and plant facilities are located in suburban Wilmington, Massachusetts not far from the New Hampshire border and within easy commuting distance of metropolitan Cambridge and Boston.

Our continued success and accelerated growth has created many new professional opportunities. Some of these are briefly described below.

Inertial Systems Analysts

Immediate and future assignments exist at various experience levels for individuals who can design and evaluate techniques of aligning, calibrating and updating (realigning) inertial navigation/guidance systems. You will model inertial components, errors, and other sources of error, and design reduced state Kalman filters for multistor systems. An advanced degree in EE, ME, Astronautical Engineering or Engineering Science is required, with a working knowledge of modern estimation and control theory, and error analysis of inertial navigation/guidance systems.

Information Systems Programmer Analysts

You will assist the Program Manager in the analysis and design of information systems and perform program module specifying, diagramming, coding, testing and documentation from system specifications. Your competency should span systems analysis for hardware, software, and applications. (Note: All these assignments involve customer contact and some foreign travel. One position is based in Washington, D.C.). Qualified candidates will have a Bachelor's degree or the equivalent, and at least two years of COBOL and data-base experience, preferably on Honeywell 6000 systems.

Software Programmer (H6000)

You will assist Programmer Analysts in the preparation of program module specifications. Competency in programming languages and data access methods is required, together with a Bachelor's degree and at least one year's experience with the H6000 operating system.

Senior Systems Analysis Consultants

You will evaluate the feasibility of new computer software projects, and investigate and solve special systems problems in consultation with senior program managers. Qualified candidates will have a Bachelor's degree and seven years' computer experience, with demonstrated competence in the highest levels of systems analysis, and special competence in one or more technical areas.

Information Systems Programmers

You will assist programmer analysts in the preparation of program module specifications and diagram, code, debug and test modules. A Bachelor's degree or its equivalent is required, with at least a year's related experience. COBOL knowledge is essential and DBMS will be helpful.

Data Base Manager

Qualified candidates will have a BS degree in Computer Science or Engineering, with ten years' experience in developing large-scale computer programs of integrated models and data banks. This experience must be in scientific programming and include managerial responsibilities.

Other career assignments exist for the following:

- Military Computer Engineer
- Logistics Engineers
- Senior Avionics Engineer
- Senior Engineer (Jet Engines)
- Senior Engineer (RADAR)

Ex-Convict Sought as Ted Gross Killer

By MAURICE CARROLL
The manager of the Bronx bowling alleys that figured in the kickback charges that sent Ted Gross to prison was sought by the police yesterday as his killer.

A team of detectives headed by Capt. Harold Coleman talked with Miss Sneed and with Mr. Gross's family and then, on Sunday night, raided the apartment where Mr. Gilmore, according to neighbors, had lived with a woman and an infant for about three months. But they found no one there.

Subsequently, the police asked anyone with information about the shooting to telephone a special number—287-0311. The police, who said that two men had been involved, then issued the alarm for Mr. Gilmore. In September 1971 Mr. Gilmore was accused of shooting a man to death on a Brooklyn Street. The charge was reduced to first-degree manslaughter and he was released from prison in 1974.

New Plant Designed to Make Steel From R

The major drawback of steel or iron produced from recycled metals is that it costs two and a half times as much to ship by rail as an equivalent weight of iron ore, under freight rate schedules enforced by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

will be the separation of the metal scrap from the refuse and subsequent shredding, physical cleaning and compacting. The second step will be the processing of the recovered metal scrap into metal products.

Mr. Liu said that the "second step cannot be exclusively done on a large scale by existing steel mills because of the associated problems that will develop in conventional furnaces." The patented electrical furnace employed by Ashmont has the technological advantage of being able to process without pollution all low-grade scrap, including that recovered from "refuses," he added.

and the operator of the bowling alleys, Mr. Mosley. In early 1973, when Mr. Gross was indicted for taking $41,400 in kickbacks during his 16 months as commissioner, Mr. Mosley was indicted along with him and named as "bag-man," the receiver of the illicit payments.

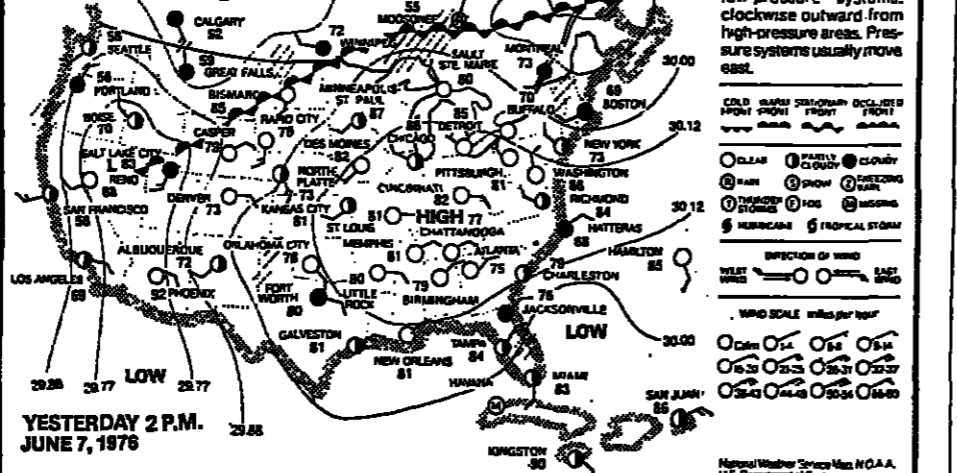

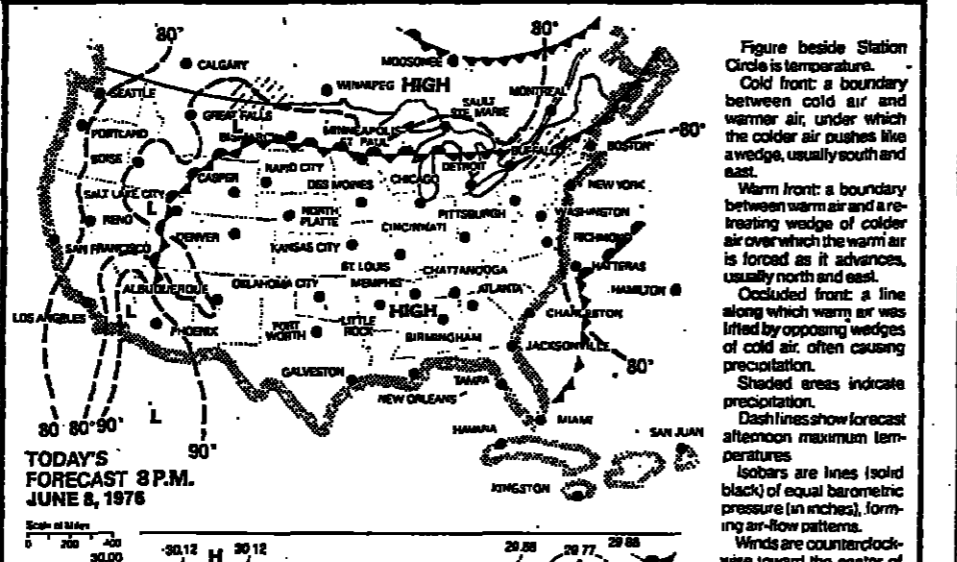

New Plant Welcomed
Enthusiastically welcoming the new plant, Mayor Beame pointed out the company would employ up to 100 persons, would purchase from the City at $2 a ton all the raw ferrous metal extracted from the incinerator residue, would reduce the need for barge transport of ash by one-third, and would reduce landfill needs by 25,000 tons a year.

1. Do you frequently telephone friends in the evening just to chat?
2. Do you generally keep your office door closed?
3. If you had to choose, would you rather be admired than liked by friends and co-workers?
4. Do you usually let people finish what they're saying to you?
5. Does your spouse (or closest friend) think of you as relaxed and easygoing?
6. a) Do you get upset when the car ahead is driving too slowly and you can't pass? b) If so, do you keep your annoyance to yourself rather than expressing it to others in your car?
7. Do you like to help with household chores such as dishwashing?
8. Do you often bring work into the bathroom?
9. Are you punctual for appointments?
10. Are you usually much annoyed when your spouse (or a friend) keeps you waiting?
11. While you're in a meeting or busy with someone in your office, do you usually refuse to take phone calls?
12. When someone is talking to you, do you often let your mind stray to other lines of thought?
